PREFACE

The present work is a modest effort to reproduce approximately, in modern measures, the venerable epic, Beowulf. Approximately, I repeat; for a very close reproduction of Anglo-Saxon verse would, to a large extent, be prose to a modern ear.

The Heyne-Socin text and glossary have been closely followed. Occasionally a deviation has been made, but always for what seemed good and sufficient reason. The translator does not aim to be an editor. Once in a while, however, he has added a conjecture of his own to the emendations quoted from the criticisms of other students of the poem.

This work is addressed to two classes of readers. From both of these alike the translator begs sympathy and co-operation. The Anglo-Saxon scholar he hopes to please by adhering faithfully to the original. The student of English literature he aims to interest by giving him, in modern garb, the most ancient epic of our race. This is a bold and venturesome undertaking; and yet there must be some students of the Teutonic past willing to follow even a daring guide, if they may read in modern phrases of the sorrows of Hrothgar, of the prowess of Beowulf, and of the feelings that stirred the hearts of our forefathers in their primeval homes.

In order to please the larger class of readers, a regular cadence has been used, a measure which, while retaining the essential characteristics of the original, permits the reader to see ahead of him in reading.

Perhaps every Anglo-Saxon scholar has his own theory as to how Beowulf should be translated. Some have given us prose versions of what we believe to be a great poem. Is it any reflection on our honored Kemble and Arnold to say that their translations fail to show a layman that Beowulf is justly called our first epic? Of those translators who have used verse, several have written from what would seem a mistaken point of view. Is it proper, for instance, that the grave and solemn speeches of Beowulf and Hrothgar be put in ballad measures, tripping lightly and airily along? Or, again, is it fitting that the rough martial music of Anglo-Saxon verse be interpreted to us in the smooth measures of modern blank verse? Do we hear what has been beautifully called "the clanging tread of a warrior in mail"?

Of all English translations of Beowulf, that of Professor Garnett alone gives any adequate idea of the chief characteristics of this great Teutonic epic.

The measure used in the present translation is believed to be as near a reproduction of the original as modern English affords. The cadences closely resemble those used by Browning in some of his most striking poems. The four stresses of the Anglo-Saxon verse are retained, and as much thesis and anacrusis is allowed as is consistent with a regular cadence. Alliteration has been used to a large extent; but it was thought that modern ears would hardly tolerate it on every line. End-rhyme has been used occasionally; internal rhyme, sporadically. Both have some warrant in Anglo-Saxon poetry. (For end-rhyme, see 1 53, 1 54; for internal rhyme, 2 21, 6 40.)

What Gummere¹ calls the “rime-giver” has been studiously kept; viz., the first accented syllable in the second half-verse always carries the alliteration; and the last accented syllable alliterates only sporadically. Alternate alliteration is occasionally used as in the original. (See 7 61, 8 5.)

No two accented syllables have been brought together, except occasionally after a cæsural pause. (See 2 19 and 12 1.) Or, scientifically speaking, Sievers’s C type has been avoided as not consonant with the plan of translation. Several of his types, however, constantly occur; e.g. A and a variant (/ x | / x) (/ x x | / x); B and a variant (x / | x /) (x x / | x /); a variant of D (/ x | / x x); E (/ x x | /). Anacrusis gives further variety to the types used in the translation.

The parallelisms of the original have been faithfully preserved. (E.g., 1 16 and 1 17: “Lord” and “Wielder of Glory”; 1 30, 1 31, 1 32; 2 12 and 2 13; 2 27 and 2 28; 3 5 and 3 6.) Occasionally, some loss has been sustained; but, on the other hand, a gain has here and there been made.

The effort has been made to give a decided flavor of archaism to the translation. All words not in keeping with the spirit of the poem have been avoided. Again, though many archaic words have been used, there are none, it is believed, which are not found in standard modern poetry.

With these preliminary remarks, it will not be amiss to give an outline of the story of the poem.

THE STORY

Hrothgar, king of the Danes, or Scyldings, builds a great mead-hall, or palace, in which he hopes to feast his liegemen and to give them presents. The joy of king and retainers is, however, of short duration. Grendel, the monster, is seized with hateful jealousy. He cannot brook the sounds of joyance that reach him down in his fen-dwelling near the hall. Oft and anon he goes to the joyous building, bent on direful mischief. Thane after thane is ruthlessly carried off and devoured, while no one is found strong enough and bold enough to cope with the monster. For twelve years he persecutes Hrothgar and his vassals.

Over sea, a day's voyage off, Beowulf, of the Geats, nephew of Higelac, king of the Geats, hears of Grendel's doings and of Hrothgar's misery. He resolves to crush the fell monster and relieve the aged king. With fourteen chosen companions, he sets sail for Dane-land. Reaching that country, he soon persuades Hrothgar of his ability to help him. The hours that elapse before night are spent in beer-drinking and conversation. When Hrothgar's bedtime comes he leaves the hall in charge of Beowulf, telling him that never before has he given to another the absolute wardship of his palace. All retire to rest, Beowulf, as it were, sleeping upon his arms.

Grendel comes, the great march-stepper, bearing God's anger. He seizes and kills one of the sleeping warriors. Then he advances towards Beowulf. A fierce and desperate hand-to-hand struggle ensues. No arms are used, both combatants trusting to strength and hand-grip. Beowulf tears Grendel's shoulder from its socket, and the monster retreats to his den, howling and yelling with agony and fury. The wound is fatal.

The next morning, at early dawn, warriors in numbers flock to the hall Heorot, to hear the news. Joy is boundless. Glee runs high. Hrothgar and his retainers are lavish of gratitude and of gifts.

Grendel's mother, however, comes the next night to avenge his death. She is furious and raging. While Beowulf is sleeping in a room somewhat apart [x]from the quarters of the other warriors, she seizes one of Hrothgar's favorite counsellors, and carries him off and devours him. Beowulf is called. Determined to leave Heorot entirely purified, he arms himself, and goes down to look for the female monster. After traveling through the waters many hours, he meets her near the sea-bottom. She drags him to her den. There he sees Grendel lying dead. After a desperate and almost fatal struggle with the woman, he slays her, and swims upward in triumph, taking with him Grendel's head.

Joy is renewed at Heorot. Congratulations crowd upon the victor. Hrothgar literally pours treasures into the lap of Beowulf; and it is agreed among the vassals of the king that Beowulf will be their next liegelord.

Beowulf leaves Dane-land. Hrothgar weeps and laments at his departure.

When the hero arrives in his own land, Higelac treats him as a distinguished guest. He is the hero of the hour.

Beowulf subsequently becomes king of his own people, the Geats. After he has been ruling for fifty years, his own neighborhood is wofully harried by a fire-spewing dragon. Beowulf determines to kill him. In the ensuing struggle both Beowulf and the dragon are slain. The grief of the Geats is inexpressible. They determine, however, to leave nothing undone to honor the memory of their lord. A great funeral-pyre is built, and his body is burnt. Then a memorial-barrow is made, visible from a great distance, that sailors afar may be constantly reminded of the prowess of the national hero of Geatland.

The poem closes with a glowing tribute to his bravery, his gentleness, his goodness of heart, and his generosity.

It is the devout desire of this translator to hasten the day when the story of Beowulf shall be as familiar to English-speaking peoples as that of the Iliad. Beowulf is our first great epic. It is an epitomized history of the life of the Teutonic races. It brings vividly before us our forefathers of pre-Alfredian eras, in their love of war, of sea, and of adventure.

My special thanks are due to Professors Francis A. March and James A. Harrison, for advice, sympathy, and assistance.

GLOSSARY OF PROPER NAMES

Ælfhere.—A kinsman of Wiglaf.

Æschere.—Confidential friend of King Hrothgar. Elder brother of Yrmenlaf. Killed by Grendel.

Beanstan.—Father of Breca.

Beowulf.—Son of Scyld, the founder of the dynasty of Scyldings. Father of Healfdene, and grandfather of Hrothgar.

Beowulf.—The hero of the poem. Sprung from the stock of Geats, son of Ecgtheow. Brought up by his maternal grandfather Hrethel, and figuring in manhood as a devoted liegeman of his uncle Higelac. A hero from his youth. Has the strength of thirty men. Engages in a swimming-match with Breca. Goes to the help of Hrothgar against the monster Grendel. Vanquishes Grendel and his mother. Afterwards becomes king of the Geats. Late in life attempts to kill a fire-spewing dragon, and is slain. Is buried with great honors. His memorial mound.

Breca.—Beowulf's opponent in the famous swimming-match.

Brondings.—A people ruled by Breca.

Brosinga mene.—A famous collar once owned by the Brosings.

Cain.—Progenitor of Grendel and other monsters.

Dæghrefn.—A warrior of the Hugs, killed by Beowulf.

Danes.—Subjects of Scyld and his descendants, and hence often called Scyldings. Other names for them are Victory-Scyldings, Honor-Scyldings, Armor-Danes, Bright-Danes, East-Danes, West-Danes, North-Danes, South-Danes, Ingwins, Hrethmen.

Ecglaf.—Father of Unferth, who taunts Beowulf.

Ecgtheow.—Father of Beowulf, the hero of the poem. A widely-known Wægmunding warrior. Marries Hrethel's daughter. After slaying Heatholaf, a Wylfing, he flees his country.

Ecgwela.—A king of the Danes before Scyld.

Elan.—Sister of Hrothgar, and probably wife of Ongentheow, king of the Swedes.

Eagle Cape.—A promontory in Geat-land, under which took place Beowulf's last encounter.

Eadgils.—Son of Ohthere and brother of Eanmund.

Eanmund.—Son of Ohthere and brother of Eadgils. The reference to these brothers is vague, and variously understood. Heyne supposes as follows: Raising a revolt against their father, they are obliged to leave Sweden. They go to the land of the Geats; with what intention, is not known, but probably to conquer and plunder. The Geatish king, Heardred, is slain by one of the brothers, probably Eanmund.

Eofor.—A Geatish hero who slays Ongentheow in war, and is rewarded by Hygelac with the hand of his only daughter.

Eormenric.—A Gothic king, from whom Hama took away the famous Brosinga mene.

Eomær.—Son of Offa and Thrytho, king and queen of the Angles.

Finn.—King of the North-Frisians and the Jutes. Marries Hildeburg. At his court takes place the horrible slaughter in which the Danish general, Hnæf, fell. Later on, Finn himself is slain by Danish warriors.

Fin-land.—The country to which Beowulf was driven by the currents in his swimming-match.

Fitela.—Son and nephew of King Sigemund, whose praises are sung in XIV.

Folcwalda.—Father of Finn.

Franks.—Introduced occasionally in referring to the death of Higelac.

Frisians.—A part of them are ruled by Finn. Some of them were engaged in the struggle in which Higelac was slain.

Freaware.—Daughter of King Hrothgar. Married to Ingeld, a Heathobard prince.

Froda.—King of the Heathobards, and father of Ingeld

Garmund.—Father of Offa.

Geats, Geatmen.—The race to which the hero of the poem belongs. Also called Weder-Geats, or Weders, War-Geats, Sea-Geats. They are ruled by Hrethel, Hæthcyn, Higelac, and Beowulf.

Gepids.—Named in connection with the Danes and Swedes.

Grendel.—A monster of the race of Cain. Dwells in the fens and moors. Is furiously envious when he hears sounds of joy in Hrothgar's palace. Causes the king untold agony for years. Is finally conquered by Beowulf, and dies of his wound. His hand and arm are hung up in Hrothgar's hall Heorot. His head is cut off by Beowulf when he goes down to fight with Grendel's mother.

Guthlaf.—A Dane of Hnæf's party.

Half-Danes.—Branch of the Danes to which Hnæf belonged.

Halga.—Surnamed the Good. Younger brother of Hrothgar.

Hama.—Takes the Brosinga mene from Eormenric.

Hæreth.—Father of Higelac's queen, Hygd.

Hæthcyn.—Son of Hrethel and brother of Higelac. Kills his brother Herebeald accidentally. Is slain at Ravenswood, fighting against Ongentheow.

Helmings.—The race to which Queen Wealhtheow belonged.

Heming.—A kinsman of Garmund, perhaps nephew.

Hengest.—A Danish leader. Takes command on the fall of Hnæf.

Herebeald.—Eldest son of Hrethel, the Geatish king, and brother of Higelac. Killed by his younger brother Hæthcyn.

Heremod.—A Danish king of a dynasty before the Scylding line. Was a source of great sorrow to his people.

Hereric.—Referred to as uncle of Heardred, but otherwise unknown.

Hetwars.—Another name for the Franks.

Healfdene.—Grandson of Scyld and father of Hrothgar. Ruled the Danes long and well.

Heardred.—Son of Higelac and Hygd, king and queen of the Geats. Succeeds his father, with Beowulf as regent. Is slain by the sons of Ohthere.

Heathobards.—Race of Lombards, of which Froda is king. After Froda falls in battle with the Danes, Ingeld, his son, marries Hrothgar's daughter, Freaware, in order to heal the feud.

Heatholaf.—A Wylfing warrior slain by Beowulf's father.

Heathoremes.—The people on whose shores Breca is cast by the waves during his contest with Beowulf.

Heorogar.—Elder brother of Hrothgar, and surnamed 'Weoroda Ræswa,' Prince of the Troopers.

Hereward.—Son of the above.

Heort, Heorot.—The great mead-hall which King Hrothgar builds. It is invaded by Grendel for twelve years. Finally cleansed by Beowulf, the Geat. It is called Heort on account of the hart-antlers which decorate it.

Hildeburg.—Wife of Finn, daughter of Hoce, and related to Hnæf,—probably his sister.

Hnæf.—Leader of a branch of the Danes called Half-Danes. Killed in the struggle at Finn's castle.

Hondscio.—One of Beowulf's companions. Killed by Grendel just before Beowulf grappled with that monster.

Hoce.—Father of Hildeburg and probably of Hnæf.

Hrethel.—King of the Geats, father of Higelac, and grandfather of Beowulf.

Hrethla.—Once used for Hrethel.

Hrethmen.—Another name for the Danes.

Hrethric.—Son of Hrothgar.

Hreosna-beorh.—A promontory in Geat-land, near which Ohthere's sons made plundering raids.

Hrothgar.—The Danish king who built the hall Heort, but was long unable to enjoy it on account of Grendel's persecutions. Marries Wealhtheow, a Helming lady. Has two sons and a daughter. Is a typical Teutonic king, lavish of gifts. A devoted liegeland, as his lamentations over slain liegemen prove. Also very appreciative of kindness, as is shown by his loving gratitude to Beowulf.

Hrothmund.—Son of Hrothgar.

Hrothulf.—Probably a son of Halga, younger brother of Hrothgar. Certainly on terms of close intimacy in Hrothgar's palace.

Hrunting.—Unferth's sword, lent to Beowulf.

Hugs.—A race in alliance with the Franks and Frisians at the time of Higelac's fall.

Hun.—A Frisian warrior, probably general of the Hetwars. Gives Hengest a beautiful sword.

Hunferth.—Sometimes used for Unferth.

Hygelac, Higelac.—King of the Geats, uncle and liegeland of Beowulf, the hero of the poem.—His second wife is the lovely Hygd, daughter of Hæreth. The son of their union is Heardred. Is slain in a war with the Hugs, Franks, and Frisians combined. Beowulf is regent, and afterwards king of the Geats.

Hygd.—Wife of Higelac, and daughter of Hæreth. There are some indications that she married Beowulf after she became a widow.

Ingeld.—Son of the Heathobard king, Froda. Marries Hrothgar's daughter, Freaware, in order to reconcile the two peoples.

Ingwins.—Another name for the Danes.

Jutes.—Name sometimes applied to Finn's people.

Lafing.—Name of a famous sword presented to Hengest by Hun.

Merewing.—A Frankish king, probably engaged in the war in which Higelac was slain.

Nægling.—Beowulf's sword

Offa.—King of the Angles, and son of Garmund. Marries the terrible Thrytho who is so strongly contrasted with Hygd.

Ohthere.—Son of Ongentheow, king of the Swedes. He is father of Eanmund and Eadgils.

Onela.—Brother of Ohthere.

Ongentheow.—King of Sweden, of the Scylfing dynasty. Married, perhaps, Elan, daughter of Healfdene.

Oslaf.—A Dane of Hnæf's party.

Ravenswood.—The forest near which Hæthcyn was slain.

Scefing.—Applied (1 4) to Scyld, and meaning 'son of Scef.'

Scyld.—Founder of the dynasty to which Hrothgar, his father, and grandfather belonged. He dies, and his body is put on a vessel, and set adrift. He goes from Daneland just as he had come to it—in a bark.

Scyldings.—The descendants of Scyld. They are also called Honor-Scyldings, Victory-Scyldings, War-Scyldings, etc. (See 'Danes,' above.)

Scylfings.—A Swedish royal line to which Wiglaf belonged.

Sigemund.—Son of Wæls, and uncle and father of Fitela. His struggle with a dragon is related in connection with Beowulf's deeds of prowess.

Swerting.—Grandfather of Higelac, and father of Hrethel.

Swedes.—People of Sweden, ruled by the Scylfings.

Thrytho.—Wife of Offa, king of the Angles. Known for her fierce and unwomanly disposition. She is introduced as a contrast to the gentle Hygd, queen of Higelac.

Unferth.—Son of Ecglaf, and seemingly a confidential courtier of Hrothgar. Taunts Beowulf for having taken part in the swimming-match. Lends Beowulf his sword when he goes to look for Grendel's mother. In the MS. sometimes written Hunferth.

Wæls.—Father of Sigemund.

Wægmunding.—A name occasionally applied to Wiglaf and Beowulf, and perhaps derived from a common ancestor, Wægmund.

Weders.—Another name for Geats or Wedergeats.

Wayland.—A fabulous smith mentioned in this poem and in other old Teutonic literature.

Wendels.—The people of Wulfgar, Hrothgar's messenger and retainer. (Perhaps = Vandals.)

Wealhtheow.—Wife of Hrothgar. Her queenly courtesy is well shown in the poem.

Weohstan, or Wihstan.—A Wægmunding, and father of Wiglaf.

Whale's Ness.—A prominent promontory, on which Beowulf's mound was built.

Wiglaf.—Son of Wihstan, and related to Beowulf. He remains faithful to Beowulf in the fatal struggle with the fire-drake. Would rather die than leave his lord in his dire emergency.

Wonred.—Father of Wulf and Eofor.

Wulf.—Son of Wonred. Engaged in the battle between Higelac's and Ongentheow's forces, and had a hand-to-hand fight with Ongentheow himself. Ongentheow disables him, and is thereupon slain by Eofor.

Wulfgar.—Lord of the Wendels, and retainer of Hrothgar

Wylfings.—A people to whom belonged Heatholaf, who was slain by Ecgtheow.

Yrmenlaf.—Younger brother of Æschere, the hero whose death grieved Hrothgar so deeply

I. THE LIFE AND DEATH OF SCYLD

Lo! the Spear-Danes' glory through splendid achievements
 The folk-kings' former fame we have heard of,
 How princes displayed then their prowess-in-battle.
 Oft Scyld the Scefing from scathers in numbers
 From many a people their mead-benches tore.
 Since first he found him friendless and wretched,
 The earl had had terror: comfort he got for it,
 Waxed 'neath the welkin, world-honor gained,
 Till all his neighbors o'er sea were compelled to Bow to his bidding and bring him their tribute:
 An excellent atheling! After was borne him
 A son and heir, young in his dwelling,
 Whom God-Father sent to solace the people.
 He had marked the misery malice had caused them,
¹That reaved of their rulers they wretched had erstwhile²
 Long been afflicted. The Lord, in requital, Wielder of Glory, with world-honor blessed him.
 Famed was Beowulf, far spread the glory
 Of Scyld's great son in the lands of the Danemen.
 So the carle that is young, by kindnesses rendered
 The friends of his father, with fees in abundance
 Must be able to earn that when age approacheth
 Eager companions aid him requitingly,
 When war assaults him serve him as liegemen:
 By praise-worthy actions must honor be got
 'Mong all of the races. At the hour that was fated Scyld then departed to the All-Father's keeping Warlike to wend him; away then they bare him
 To the flood of the current, his fond-loving comrades,

¹ For the 'pæt' of verse 15, Sievers suggests 'pá' (= which). If this be accepted, the sentence 'He had ... afflicted' will read: He (i.e. God) had perceived the malice-caused sorrow which they, lordless, had formerly long endured.

² For 'aldor-léase' (15) Gr. suggested 'aldor-ceare': He perceived their distress, that they formerly had suffered life-sorrow a long while.

As himself he had bidden, while the friend of the Scyldings
 Word-sway wielded, and the well-lovèd land-prince
 Long did rule them.³ The ring-stemmèd vessel,
 Bark of the atheling, lay there at anchor,
 Icy in glimmer and eager for sailing;
 The belovèd leader laid they down there,
 Giver of rings, on the breast of the vessel,
 The famed by the mainmast. A many of jewels,
 Of fretted embossings, from far-lands brought over,
 Was placed near at hand then; and heard I not ever
 That a folk ever furnished a float more superbly
 With weapons of warfare, weeds for the battle,
 Bills and burnies; on his bosom sparkled
 Many a jewel that with him must travel
 On the flush of the flood afar on the current.
 And favors no fewer they furnished him soothly,
 Excellent folk-gems, than others had given him
 Who when first he was born outward did send him
 Lone on the main, the merest of infants:
 And a gold-fashioned standard they stretched under heaven
 High o'er his head, let the holm-currents bear him,
 Seaward consigned him: sad was their spirit,
 Their mood very mournful. Men are not able Soothly to tell us, they in halls who reside,⁴ Heroes under heaven, to what haven he hied.

⁴ The reading of the H.-So. text has been quite closely followed; but some eminent scholars read 'séle-rædenne' for 'sele-rædende.' If that be adopted, the passage will read: Men cannot tell us, indeed, the order of Fate, etc. 'Sele-rædende' has two things to support it: (1) v. 1347; (2) it affords a parallel to 'men' in v. 50.

II. SCYLD'S SUCCESSORS.—HROTHGAR'S GREAT MEAD-HALL

In the boroughs then Beowulf, bairn of the Scyldings,
Belovèd land-prince, for long-lasting season
Was famed mid the folk (his father departed,
The prince from his dwelling), till afterward sprang
Great-minded Healfdene; the Danes in his lifetime
He graciously governed, grim-mooded, agèd.
Four bairns of his body born in succession
Woke in the world, war-troopers' leader
Heorogar, Hrothgar, and Halga the good;
Heard I that Elan was Ongentheow's consort,
The well-beloved bedmate of the War-Scylfing leader.
Then glory in battle to Hrothgar was given,
Waxing of war-fame, that willingly kinsmen
Obeyed his bidding, till the boys grew to manhood,
A numerous band. It burned in his spirit
To urge his folk to found a great building,
A mead-hall grander than men of the era
Ever had heard of, and in it to share
With young and old all of the blessings
The Lord had allowed him, save life and retainers.
Then the work I find afar was assigned
To many races in middle-earth's regions,
To adorn the great folk-hall. In due time it happened
Early 'mong men, that 'twas finished entirely,
The greatest of hall-buildings; Heorot he named it
Who wide-reaching word-sway wielded 'mong earlmen.
His promise he brake not, rings he lavished,
Treasure at banquet. Towered the hall up
High and horn-crested, huge between antlers:
It battle-waves bided, the blasting fire-demon;
Ere long then from hottest hatred must sword-wrath
Arise for a woman's husband and father.

Then the mighty war-spirit¹ endured for a season,
Bore it bitterly, he who bided in darkness,
That light-hearted laughter loud in the building
Greeted him daily; there was dulcet harp-music, Clear song of the singer. He said that was able To tell from of old earthmen's beginnings,
That Father Almighty earth had created,
The winsome wold that the water encircleth,
Set exultingly the sun's and the moon's beams
To lavish their lustre on land-folk and races,
And earth He embellished in all her regions
With limbs and leaves; life He bestowed too
On all the kindreds that live under heaven.
So blessed with abundance, brimming with joyance,
The warriors abided, till a certain one gan to Dog them with deeds of direfullest malice,
A foe in the hall-building: this horrible stranger²
Was Grendel entitled, the march-stepper famous
Who³ dwelt in the moor-fens, the marsh and the fastness;
The wan-mooded being abode for a season
In the land of the giants, when the Lord and Creator
Had banned him and branded. For that bitter murder,
The killing of Abel, all-ruling Father
The kindred of Cain crushed with His vengeance;
In the feud He rejoiced not, but far away drove him
From kindred and kind, that crime to atone for,
Meter of Justice. Thence ill-favored creatures,
Elves and giants, monsters of ocean,
Came into being, and the giants that longtime Grappled with God; He gave them requital.

¹ R. and t. B. prefer 'ellor-gæst' to 'ellen-gæst' (86): Then the stranger from afar endured, etc.

² Some authorities would translate 'demon' instead of 'stranger.'

³ Some authorities arrange differently, and render: Who dwelt in the moor-fens, the marsh and the fastness, the land of the giant-race.

III. GRENDEL THE MURDERER

When the sun was sunken, he set out to visit
 The lofty hall-building, how the Ring-Danes had used it
 For beds and benches when the banquet was over.
 Then he found there reposing many a noble
 Asleep after supper; sorrow the heroes,¹ Misery knew not. The monster of evil
 Greedy and cruel tarried but little,
 Fell and frantic, and forced from their slumbers
 Thirty of thanemen; thence he departed
 Leaping and laughing, his lair to return to,
 With surfeit of slaughter sallying homeward.
 In the dusk of the dawning, as the day was just breaking,
 Was Grendel's prowess revealed to the warriors:
 Then, his meal-taking finished, a moan was uplifted,
 Morning-cry mighty. The man-ruler famous,
 The long-worthy atheling, sat very woful,
 Suffered great sorrow, sighed for his liegemen,
 When they had seen the track of the hateful pursuer,
 The spirit accursèd: too crushing that sorrow,
 Too loathsome and lasting. Not longer he tarried,
 But one night after continued his slaughter
 Shameless and shocking, shrinking but little
 From malice and murder; they mastered him fully.
 He was easy to find then who elsewhere looked for
 A pleasanter place of repose in the lodges,
 A bed in the bowers. Then was brought to his notice
 Told him truly by token apparent
 The hall-thane's hatred: he held himself after Further and faster who the foeman did baffle.
²So ruled he and strongly strove against justice

¹ The translation is based on 'weras,' adopted by H.-So.—K. and Th. read 'wera' and, arranging differently, render 119(2)-120: They knew not sorrow, the wretchedness of man, aught of misfortune.—For 'unhælo' (120) R. suggests 'unfælo': The uncanny creature, greedy and cruel, etc.

Lone against all men, till empty uptowered
 The choicest of houses. Long was the season:
 Twelve-winters' time torture suffered
 The friend of the Scyldings, every affliction, Endless agony; hence it after³ became Certainly known to the children of men
 Sadly in measures, that long against Hrothgar
 Grendel struggled:—his grudges he cherished,
 Murderous malice, many a winter,
 Strife unremitting, and peacefully wished he ⁴Life-woe to lift from no liegeman at all of The men of the Dane-folk, for money to settle,
 No counsellor needed count for a moment
 On handsome amends at the hands of the murderer;
 The monster of evil fiercely did harass,
 The ill-planning death-shade, both elder and younger,
 Trapping and tricking them. He trod every night then
 The mist-covered moor-fens; men do not know where Witches and wizards wander and ramble.
 So the foe of mankind many of evils
 Grievous injuries, often accomplished,
 Horrible hermit; Heort he frequented,
 Gem-bedecked palace, when night-shades had fallen (Since God did oppose him, not the throne could he touch,⁵ The light-flashing jewel, love of Him knew not).
 'Twas a fearful affliction to the friend of the Scyldings

² S. rearranges and translates: So he ruled and struggled unjustly, one against all, till the noblest of buildings stood useless (it was a long while) twelve years' time: the friend of the Scyldings suffered distress, every woe, great sorrows, etc.

⁵ Of this difficult passage the following interpretations among others are given: (1) Though Grendel has frequented Heorot as a demon, he could not become ruler of the Danes, on account of his hostility to God. (2) Hrothgar was much grieved that Grendel had not appeared before his throne to receive presents. (3) He was not permitted to devastate the hall, on account of the Creator; i.e. God wished to make his visit fatal to him.—Ne ... wisse (169) W. renders: Nor had he any desire to do so; 'his' being obj. gen. = danach.

Soul-crushing sorrow. Not seldom in private Sat the king in his council; conference held they
What the braves should determine 'gainst terrors unlooked for.
At the shrines of their idols often they promised Gifts and offerings, earnestly prayed they
The devil from hell would help them to lighten
Their people's oppression. Such practice they used then,
Hope of the heathen; hell they remembered
In innermost spirit, God they knew not,
Judge of their actions, All-wielding Ruler,
No praise could they give the Guardian of Heaven,
The Wielder of Glory. Woe will be his who Through furious hatred his spirit shall drive to The clutch of the fire, no comfort shall look for,
Wax no wiser; well for the man who,
Living his life-days, his Lord may face
And find defence in his Father's embrace!

IV. BEOWULF GOES TO HROTHGAR'S ASSISTANCE

So Healfdene's kinsman constantly mused on
 His long-lasting sorrow; the battle-thane clever
 Was not anywise able evils to 'scape from:
 Too crushing the sorrow that came to the people,
 Loathsome and lasting the life-grinding torture,
 Greatest of night-woes. So Higelac's liegeman,
 Good amid Geatmen, of Grendel's achievements
 Heard in his home:¹ of heroes then living
 He was stoutest and strongest, sturdy and noble.
 He bade them prepare him a bark that was trusty;
 He said he the war-king would seek o'er the ocean,
 The folk-leader noble, since he needed retainers.
 For the perilous project prudent companions
 Chided him little, though loving him dearly;
 They egged the brave atheling, augured him glory.
 The excellent knight from the folk of the Geatmen
 Had liegemen selected, likest to prove them
 Trustworthy warriors; with fourteen companions
 The vessel he looked for; a liegeman then showed them,
 A sea-crafty man, the bounds of the country.
 Fast the days fled; the float was a-water,
 The craft by the cliff. Clomb to the prow then Well-equipped warriors: the wave-currents twisted
 The sea on the sand; soldiers then carried
 On the breast of the vessel bright-shining jewels,
 Handsome war-armor; heroes outshoved then,
 Warmen the wood-ship, on its wished-for adventure.
 The foamy-necked floater fanned by the breeze,
 Likest a bird, glided the waters,
 Till twenty and four hours thereafter

¹ 'From hám' (194) is much disputed. One rendering is: Beowulf, being away from home, heard of Hrothgar's troubles, etc. Another, that adopted by S. and endorsed in the H.-So. notes, is: B. heard from his neighborhood (neighbors), i.e. in his home, etc. A third is: B., being at home, heard this as occurring away from home. The H.-So. glossary and notes conflict.

The twist-stemmed vessel had traveled such distance
 That the sailing-men saw the sloping embankments,
 The sea cliffs gleaming, precipitous mountains,
 Nesses enormous: they were nearing the limits
 At the end of the ocean.² Up thence quickly
 The men of the Weders clomb to the mainland,
 Fastened their vessel (battle weeds rattled, War burnies clattered), the Wielder they thanked
 That the ways o'er the waters had waxen so gentle.
 Then well from the cliff edge the guard of the Scyldings
 Who the sea-cliffs should see to, saw o'er the gangway
 Brave ones bearing beauteous targets,
 Armor all ready, anxiously thought he,
 Musing and wondering what men were approaching.
 High on his horse then Hrothgar's retainer
 Turned him to coastward, mightily brandished
 His lance in his hands, questioned with boldness.
 "Who are ye men here, mail-covered warriors
 Clad in your corslets, come thus a-driving
 A high riding ship o'er the shoals of the waters, ³And hither 'neath helmets have hied o'er the ocean?
 I have been strand-guard, standing as warden,
 Lest enemies ever anywise ravage
 Danish dominions with army of war-ships.
 More boldly never have warriors ventured
 Hither to come; of kinsmen's approval,
 Word-leave of warriors, I ween that ye surely Nothing have known. Never a greater one

² 'Eoletes' (224) is marked with a (?) by H.-So.; our rendering simply follows his conjecture.—Other conjectures as to 'eolet' are: (1) voyage, (2) toil, labor, (3) hasty journey.

³ The lacuna of the MS at this point has been supplied by various conjectures. The reading adopted by H.-So. has been rendered in the above translation. W., like H.-So., makes 'ic' the beginning of a new sentence, but, for 'helmas bæron,' he reads 'hringed stefnan.' This has the advantage of giving a parallel to 'brontne ceol' instead of a kenning for 'go.'—B puts the (?) after 'holmas', and begins a new sentence at the middle of the line. Translate: What warriors are ye, clad in armor, who have thus come bringing the foaming vessel over the water way, hither over the seas? For some time on the wall I have been coast guard, etc. S. endorses most of what B. says, but leaves out 'on the wall' in the last sentence. If W.'s 'hringed stefnan' be accepted, change line 51 above to, A ring-stemmed vessel hither o'ersea.

Of earls o'er the earth have I had a sight of
Than is one of your number, a hero in armor;
No low-ranking fellow⁴ adorned with his weapons,
But launching them little, unless looks are deceiving,
And striking appearance. Ere ye pass on your journey
As treacherous spies to the land of the Scyldings
And farther fare, I fully must know now
What race ye belong to. Ye far-away dwellers,
Sea-faring sailors, my simple opinion
Hear ye and hearken: haste is most fitting Plainly to tell me what place ye are come from."

⁴ 'Seld-guma' (249) is variously rendered: (1) housecarle; (2) home-stayer; (3) common man. Dr. H. Wood suggests a man-at-arms in another's house.

V. THE GEATS REACH HEOROT

The chief of the strangers rendered him answer,
 War-troopers' leader, and word-treasure opened:
 "We are sprung from the lineage of the people of Geatland,
 And Higelac's hearth-friends. To heroes unnumbered
 My father was known, a noble head-warrior
 Ecgtheow titled; many a winter
 He lived with the people, ere he passed on his journey,
 Old from his dwelling; each of the counsellors
 Widely mid world-folk well remembers him.
 We, kindly of spirit, the lord of thy people,
 The son of King Healfdene, have come here to visit,
 Folk-troop's defender: be free in thy counsels!
 To the noble one bear we a weighty commission,
 The helm of the Danemen; we shall hide, I ween,
 Naught of our message. Thou know'st if it happen,
 As we soothly heard say, that some savage despoiler,
 Some hidden pursuer, on nights that are murky
 By deeds very direful 'mid the Danemen exhibits
 Hatred unheard of, horrid destruction
 And the falling of dead. From feelings least selfish
 I am able to render counsel to Hrothgar,
 How he, wise and worthy, may worst the destroyer,
 If the anguish of sorrow should ever be lessened,¹ Comfort come to him, and care-waves grow cooler,
 Or ever hereafter he agony suffer
 And troublous distress, while towereth upward
 The handsomest of houses high on the summit."
 Bestriding his stallion, the strand-watchman answered,
 The doughty retainer: "The difference surely
 'Twixt words and works, the warlike shield-bearer
 Who judgeth wisely well shall determine.

¹ 'Edwendan' (280) B. takes to be the subs. 'edwenden' (cf. 1775); and 'bisigu' he takes as gen. sing., limiting 'edwenden': If reparation for sorrows is ever to come. This is supported by t.B.

This band, I hear, beareth no malice
 To the prince of the Scyldings. Pass ye then onward
 With weapons and armor. I shall lead you in person;
 To my war-trusty vassals command I shall issue
 To keep from all injury your excellent vessel,
 Your fresh-tarred craft, 'gainst every opposer
 Close by the sea-shore, till the curved-neckèd bark shall Waft back again the well-beloved hero
 O'er the way of the water to Weder dominions.
 To warrior so great 'twill be granted sure
 In the storm of strife to stand secure."
 Onward they fared then (the vessel lay quiet,
 The broad-bosomed bark was bound by its cable, Firmly at anchor); the boar-signs glistened²
 Bright on the visors vivid with gilding,
 Blaze-hardened, brilliant; the boar acted warden.
 The heroes hastened, hurried the liegemen,
 Descended together, till they saw the great palace,
 The well-fashioned wassail-hall wondrous and gleaming:
 'Mid world-folk and kindreds that was widest reputed
 Of halls under heaven which the hero abode in;
 Its lustre enlightened lands without number.
 Then the battle-brave hero showed them the glittering
 Court of the bold ones, that they easily thither
 Might fare on their journey; the aforementioned warrior
 Turning his courser, quoth as he left them:
 "'Tis time I were faring; Father Almighty
 Grant you His grace, and give you to journey
 Safe on your mission! To the sea I will get me
 'Gainst hostile warriors as warden to stand."

² Combining the emendations of B. and t.B., we may read: The boar-images glistened ... brilliant, protected the life of the war-mooded man. They read 'ferh-wearde' (305) and 'gúðmódgum men' (306).

VI. BEOWULF INTRODUCES HIMSELF AT THE PALACE

The highway glistened with many-hued pebble,
 A by-path led the liegemen together.
¹Firm and hand-locked the war-burnie glistened,
 The ring-sword radiant rang 'mid the armor
 As the party was approaching the palace together
 In warlike equipments. 'Gainst the wall of the building
 Their wide-fashioned war-shields they weary did set then,
 Battle-shields sturdy; benchward they turned then;
 Their battle-sarks rattled, the gear of the heroes;
 The lances stood up then, all in a cluster,
 The arms of the seamen, ashen-shafts mounted
 With edges of iron: the armor-clad troopers
 Were decked with weapons. Then a proud-mooded hero
 Asked of the champions questions of lineage:
 "From what borders bear ye your battle-shields plated,
 Gilded and gleaming, your gray-colored burnies,
 Helmets with visors and heap of war-lances?—
 To Hrothgar the king I am servant and liegeman.
 'Mong folk from far-lands found I have never Men so many of mien more courageous.
 I ween that from valor, nowise as outlaws,
 But from greatness of soul ye sought for King Hrothgar."
 Then the strength-famous earlman answer rendered,
 The proud-mooded Wederchief replied to his question,
 Hardy 'neath helmet: "Higelac's mates are we;
 Beowulf hight I. To the bairn of Healfdene,
 The famous folk-leader, I freely will tell
 To thy prince my commission, if pleasantly hearing
 He'll grant we may greet him so gracious to all men."

¹ Instead of the punctuation given by H.-So, S. proposed to insert a comma after 'scír' (322), and to take 'hring-íren' as meaning 'ring-mail' and as parallel with 'gúð-byrne.' The passage would then read: The firm and hand-locked war-burnie shone, bright ring-mail, rang 'mid the armor, etc.

Wulfgar replied then (he was prince of the Wendels,
His boldness of spirit was known unto many,
His prowess and prudence): "The prince of the Scyldings,
The friend-lord of Danemen, I will ask of thy journey,
The giver of rings, as thou urgest me do it,
The folk-chief famous, and inform thee early
What answer the good one mindeth to render me."
He turned then hurriedly where Hrothgar was sitting, ²Old and hoary, his earlmen attending him;
The strength-famous went till he stood at the shoulder
Of the lord of the Danemen, of courteous thanemen
The custom he minded. Wulfgar addressed then
His friendly liegelord: "Folk of the Geatmen
O'er the way of the waters are wafted hither,
Faring from far-lands: the foremost in rank
The battle-champions Beowulf title.
They make this petition: with thee, O my chieftain,
To be granted a conference; O gracious King Hrothgar,
Friendly answer refuse not to give them!
In war-trappings weeded worthy they seem
Of earls to be honored; sure the atheling is doughty
Who headed the heroes hitherward coming."

² Gr. and others translate 'unhár' by 'bald'; old and bald.

VII. HROTHGAR AND BEOWULF

Hrothgar answered, helm of the Scyldings:

"I remember this man as the merest of striplings.

His father long dead now was Ecgtheow titled,

Him Hrethel the Geatman granted at home his

One only daughter; his battle-brave son

Is come but now, sought a trustworthy friend.

Seafaring sailors asserted it then,

Who valuable gift-gems of the Geatmen¹ carried

As peace-offering thither, that he thirty men's grapple

Has in his hand, the hero-in-battle.

The holy Creator usward sent him,

To West-Dane warriors, I ween, for to render

'Gainst Grendel's grimness gracious assistance:

I shall give to the good one gift-gems for courage.

Hasten to bid them hither to speed them,²

To see assembled this circle of kinsmen;

Tell them expressly they're welcome in sooth to

The men of the Danes." To the door of the building

Wulfgar went then, this word-message shouted:

"My victorious liegelord bade me to tell you,

The East-Danes' atheling, that your origin knows he,

And o'er wave-billows wafted ye welcome are hither,

Valiant of spirit. Ye straightway may enter

Clad in corslets, cased in your helmets,

To see King Hrothgar. Here let your battle-boards,

Wood-spears and war-shafts, await your conferring."

The mighty one rose then, with many a liegeman,

An excellentthane-group; some there did await them,

And as bid of the brave one the battle-gear guarded.

Together they hied them, while the hero did guide them,

¹ Some render 'gif-sceattas' by 'tribute.' — 'Géata' B. and Th. emended to 'Géatum.' If this be accepted, change 'of the Geatmen' to 'to the Geatmen.'

² If t.B.'s emendation of vv. 386, 387 be accepted, the two lines, 'Hasten ... kinsmen' will read: Hasten thou, bid the throng of kinsmen go into the hall together.

'Neath Heorot's roof; the high-minded went then Sturdy 'neath helmet till he stood in the building.
 Beowulf spake (his burnie did glisten,
 His armor seamed over by the art of the craftsman):
 "Hail thou, Hrothgar! I am Higelac's kinsman
 And vassal forsooth; many a wonder
 I dared as a stripling. The doings of Grendel,
 In far-off fatherland I fully did know of:
 Sea-farers tell us, this hall-building standeth,
 Excellent edifice, empty and useless
 To all the earlmen after evenlight's glimmer
 'Neath heaven's bright hues hath hidden its glory.
 This my earls then urged me, the most excellent of them,
 Carles very clever, to come and assist thee,
 Folk-leader Hrothgar; fully they knew of
 The strength of my body. Themselves they beheld me
 When I came from the contest, when covered with gore
 Foes I escaped from, where five³ I had bound,
 The giant-race wasted, in the waters destroying
 The nickers by night, bore numberless sorrows,
 The Weders avenged (woes had they suffered)
 Enemies ravaged; alone now with Grendel
 I shall manage the matter, with the monster of evil,
 The giant, decide it. Thee I would therefore Beg of thy bounty, Bright-Danish chieftain,
 Lord of the Scyldings, this single petition:
 Not to refuse me, defender of warriors,
 Friend-lord of folks, so far have I sought thee,
 That I may unaided, my earlmen assisting me,
 This brave-mooded war-band, purify Heorot.
 I have heard on inquiry, the horrible creature

³ For 420 (b) and 421 (a), B. suggests: þær ic (on) fifelgeban ýðde eotena cyn = where I in the ocean destroyed the eoten-race.—t.B. accepts B.'s "brilliant" 'fifelgeban,' omits 'on,' emends 'cyn' to 'hám,' arranging: þær ic fifelgeban ýðde, eotena hám = where I desolated the ocean, the home of the eotens.—This would be better but for changing 'cyn' to 'hám.'—I suggest: þær ic fifelgeband (cf. nhd. Bande) ýðde, eotena cyn = where I conquered the monster band, the race of the eotens. This makes no change except to read 'fifel' for 'fife.'

From veriest rashness recks not for weapons;
 I this do scorn then, so be Higelac gracious,
 My liegelord beloved, lenient of spirit,
 To bear a blade or a broad-fashioned target,
 A shield to the onset; only with hand-grip
 The foe I must grapple, fight for my life then,
 Foeman with foeman; he fain must rely on
 The doom of the Lord whom death layeth hold of.
 I ween he will wish, if he win in the struggle,
 To eat in the war-hall earls of the Geat-folk,
 Boldly to swallow⁴ them, as of yore he did often
 The best of the Hrethmen! Thou needest not trouble
 A head-watch to give me;⁵ he will have me dripping
 And dreary with gore, if death overtake me,⁶
 Will bear me off bleeding, biting and mouthing me,
 The hermit will eat me, heedless of pity,
 Marking the moor-fens; no more wilt thou need then Find me my food.⁷ If I fall in the battle,
 Send to Higelac the armor that serveth
 To shield my bosom, the best of equipments,
 Richest of ring-mails; 'tis the relic of Hrethla,
 The work of Wayland. Goes Weird as she must go!"

⁴ 'Unforhte' (444) is much disputed.—H.-So. wavers between adj. and adv. Gr. and B. take it as an adv. modifying etan: Will eat the Geats fearlessly.—Kl. considers this reading absurd, and proposes 'anforhte' = timid.—Understanding 'unforhte' as an adj. has this advantage, viz. that it gives a parallel to 'Geátena leóde': but to take it as an adv. is more natural. Furthermore, to call the Geats 'brave' might, at this point, seem like an implied thrust at the Danes, so long helpless; while to call his own men 'timid' would be befouling his own nest.

⁵ For 'head-watch,' cf. H.-So. notes and cf. v. 2910.—Th. translates: Thou wilt not need my head to hide (i.e., thou wilt have no occasion to bury me, as Grendel will devour me whole).—Simrock imagines a kind of dead-watch.—Dr. H. Wood suggests: Thou wilt not have to bury so much as my head (for Grendel will be a thorough undertaker),—grim humor.

⁷ Owing to the vagueness of 'feorme' (451), this passage is variously translated. In our translation, H.-So.'s glossary has been quite closely followed. This agrees substantially with B.'s translation (P. and B. XII. 87). R. translates: Thou needst not take care longer as to the consumption of my dead body. 'Líc' is also a crux here, as it may mean living body or dead body.

Hrothgar discoursed, helm of the Scyldings:
 “To defend our folk and to furnish assistance,¹
 Thou soughtest us hither, good friend Beowulf.
 The fiercest of feuds thy father engaged in,
 Heatholaf killed he in hand-to-hand conflict
 ’Mid Wilfingish warriors; then the Wederish people
 For fear of a feud were forced to disown him.
 Thence flying he fled to the folk of the South-Danes,
 The race of the Scyldings, o’er the roll of the waters;
 I had lately begun then to govern the Danemen,
 The hoard-seat of heroes held in my youth,
 Rich in its jewels: dead was Heregar,
 My kinsman and elder had earth-joys forsaken,
 Healfdene his bairn. He was better than I am!
 That feud thereafter for a fee I compounded;
 O’er the weltering waters to the Wilfings I sent Ornaments old; oaths did he swear me.
 It pains me in spirit to any to tell it,
 What grief in Heorot Grendel hath caused me,
 What horror unlooked-for, by hatred unceasing.
 Waned is my war-band, wasted my hall-troop;
 Weird hath offcast them to the clutches of Grendel.
 God can easily hinder the scather
 From deeds so direful. Oft drunken with beer
 O’er the ale-vessel promised warriors in armor
 They would willingly wait on the wassailing-benches
 A grapple with Grendel, with grimmest of edges.
 Then this mead-hall at morning with murder was reeking,
 The building was bloody at breaking of daylight,

¹ B. and S. reject the reading given in H.-So., and suggested by Grtvg. B. suggests for 457-458:

wáere-ryhtum þú, wine mín Béowulf, and for ár-stafum úsíc sóhtest.

This means: From the obligations of clientage, my friend Beowulf, and for assistance thou hast sought us.—This gives coherence to Hrothgar’s opening remarks in VIII., and also introduces a new motive for Beowulf’s coming to Hrothgar’s aid.

The bench-deals all flooded, dripping and bloodied,
 The folk-hall was gory: I had fewer retainers,
 Dear-beloved warriors, whom death had laid hold of.
 Sit at the feast now, thy intents unto heroes,² Thy victor-fame show, as thy spirit doth urge thee!"
 For the men of the Geats then together assembled,
 In the beer-hall blithesome a bench was made ready;
 There warlike in spirit they went to be seated,
 Proud and exultant. A liegeman did service,
 Who a beaker embellished bore with decorum,
 And gleaming-drink poured. The gleeman sang whilom
 Hearty in Heorot; there was heroes' rejoicing,
 A numerous war-band of Weders and Danemen.

² Sit now at the feast, and disclose thy purposes to the victorious heroes, as thy spirit urges.—Kl. reaches the above translation by erasing the comma after 'meoto' and reading 'sige-hrèðsecgum.'—There are other and bolder emendations and suggestions. Of these the boldest is to regard 'meoto' as a verb (imperative), and read 'on sæl': Think upon gayety, etc.—All the renderings are unsatisfactory, the one given in our translation involving a zeugma.

IX. UNFERTH TAUNTS BEOWULF

Unferth spoke up, Ecglaf his son,
 Who sat at the feet of the lord of the Scyldings,
 Opened the jousting (the journey¹ of Beowulf,
 Sea-farer doughty, gave sorrow to Unferth
 And greatest chagrin, too, for granted he never
 That any man else on earth should attain to, Gain under heaven, more glory than he):
 "Art thou that Beowulf with Breca did struggle,
 On the wide sea-currents at swimming contended,
 Where to humor your pride the ocean ye tried,
 From vainest vaunting adventured your bodies
 In care of the waters? And no one was able Nor lief nor loth one, in the least to dissuade you
 Your difficult voyage; then ye ventured a-swimming,
 Where your arms outstretching the streams ye did cover,
 The mere-ways measured, mixing and stirring them,
 Glided the ocean; angry the waves were,
 With the weltering of winter. In the water's possession,
 Ye toiled for a seven-night; he at swimming outdid thee,
 In strength excelled thee. Then early at morning
 On the Heathoremes' shore the holm-currents tossed him,
 Sought he thenceward the home of his fathers,
 Beloved of his liegemen, the land of the Brondings,
 The peace-castle pleasant, where a people he wielded,
 Had borough and jewels. The pledge that he made thee
 The son of Beanstan hath soothly accomplished.
 Then I ween thou wilt find thee less fortunate issue,
 Though ever triumphant in onset of battle,
 A grim grappling, if Grendel thou darest
 For the space of a night near-by to wait for!"
 Beowulf answered, offspring of Ecgtheow:

¹ It has been plausibly suggested that 'síð' (in 501 and in 353) means 'arrival.' If so, translate the bracket: (the arrival of Beowulf, the brave seafarer, was a source of great chagrin to Unferth, etc.).

“My good friend Unferth, sure freely and wildly,
Thou fuddled with beer of Breca hast spoken,
Hast told of his journey! A fact I allege it,
That greater strength in the waters I had then,
Ills in the ocean, than any man else had.
We made agreement as the merest of striplings Promised each other (both of us then were Younkers in years) that we yet would adventure
Out on the ocean; it all we accomplished.
While swimming the sea-floods, sword-blade unscabbarded
Boldly we brandished, our bodies expected
To shield from the sharks. He sure was unable To swim on the waters further than I could,
More swift on the waves, nor would I from him go.
Then we two companions stayed in the ocean
Five nights together, till the currents did part us,
The weltering waters, weathers the bleakest,
And nethermost night, and the north-wind whistled
Fierce in our faces; fell were the billows.
The mere fishes’ mood was mightily ruffled:
And there against foemen my firm-knotted corslet,
Hand-jointed, hardy, help did afford me;
My battle-sark braided, brilliantly gilded,
Lay on my bosom. To the bottom then dragged me,
A hateful fiend-scather, seized me and held me,
Grim in his grapple: ’twas granted me, nathless,
To pierce the monster with the point of my weapon,
My obedient blade; battle offcarried
The mighty mere-creature by means of my hand-blow.

X. BEOWULF SILENCES UNFERTH.—GLEE IS HIGH

"So ill-meaning enemies often did cause me
 Sorrow the sorest. I served them, in quittance,
 With my dear-lovèd sword, as in sooth it was fitting;
 They missed the pleasure of feasting abundantly,
 Ill-doers evil, of eating my body,
 Of surrounding the banquet deep in the ocean;
 But wounded with edges early at morning
 They were stretched a-high on the strand of the ocean,
 Put to sleep with the sword, that sea-going travelers
 No longer thereafter were hindered from sailing
 The foam-dashing currents. Came a light from the east,
 God's beautiful beacon; the billows subsided,
 That well I could see the nesses projecting,
 The blustering crags. Weird often saveth
 The undoomed hero if doughty his valor!
 But me did it fortune¹ to fell with my weapon
 Nine of the nickers. Of night-struggle harder
 'Neath dome of the heaven heard I but rarely,
 Nor of wight more woful in the waves of the ocean;
 Yet I 'scaped with my life the grip of the monsters,
 Weary from travel. Then the waters bare me
 To the land of the Finns, the flood with the current,
 The weltering waves. Not a word hath been told me
 Of deeds so daring done by thee, Unferth,
 And of sword-terror none; never hath Breca
 At the play of the battle, nor either of you two,
 Feat so fearless performèd with weapons
 Glinting and gleaming
 I utter no boasting;

¹ The repetition of 'hwæðere' (574 and 578) is regarded by some scholars as a defect. B. suggests 'swá þær' for the first: So there it befell me, etc. Another suggestion is to change the second 'hwæðere' into 'swá þær': So there I escaped with my life, etc.

Though with cold-blooded cruelty thou killedst thy brothers,
Thy nearest of kin; thou needs must in hell get Direful damnation, though doughty thy wisdom.
I tell thee in earnest, offspring of Ecglaf,
Never had Grendel such numberless horrors,
The direful demon, done to thy liegelord,
Harrying in Heorot, if thy heart were as sturdy,
Thy mood as ferocious as thou dost describe them.
He hath found out fully that the fierce-burning hatred,
The edge-battle eager, of all of your kindred,
Of the Victory-Scyldings, need little dismay him:
Oaths he exacteth, not any he spares
Of the folk of the Danemen, but fighteth with pleasure,
Killeth and feasteth, no contest expecteth
From Spear-Danish people. But the prowess and valor
Of the earls of the Geatmen early shall venture
To give him a grapple. He shall go who is able Bravely to banquet, when the bright-light of morning
Which the second day bringeth, the sun in its ether-robcs,
O'er children of men shines from the southward!"
Then the gray-haired, war-famed giver of treasure
Was blithesome and joyous, the Bright-Danish ruler
Expected assistance; the people's protector
Heard from Beowulf his bold resolution.
There was laughter of heroes; loud was the clatter,
The words were winsome. Wealhtheow advanced then,
Consort of Hrothgar, of courtesy mindful,
Gold-decked saluted the men in the building,
And the freeborn woman the beaker presented
To the lord of the kingdom, first of the East-Danes,
Bade him be blithesome when beer was a-flowing,
Lief to his liegemen; he lustily tasted
Of banquet and beaker, battle-famed ruler.
The Helmingish lady then graciously circled
'Mid all the liegemen lesser and greater:

Treasure-cups tendered, till time was afforded
 That the decorous-mooded, diademed folk-queen
 Might bear to Beowulf the bumper o'errunning;
 She greeted the Geat-prince, God she did thank,
 Most wise in her words, that her wish was accomplished,
 That in any of earlmen she ever should look for Solace in sorrow. He accepted the beaker,
 Battle-bold warrior, at Wealhtheow's giving,
 Then equipped for combat quoth he in measures,
 Beowulf spake, offspring of Ecgtheow:

"I purposed in spirit when I mounted the ocean,
 When I boarded my boat with a band of my liegemen,
 I would work to the fullest the will of your people
 Or in foe's-clutches fastened fall in the battle.
 Deeds I shall do of daring and prowess,
 Or the last of my life-days live in this mead-hall."
 These words to the lady were welcome and pleasing,
 The boast of the Geatman; with gold trappings broidered
 Went the freeborn folk-queen her fond-lord to sit by.
 Then again as of yore was heard in the building
 Courtly discussion, conquerors' shouting,
 Heroes were happy, till Healfdene's son would Go to his slumber to seek for refreshing;
 For the horrid hell-monster in the hall-building knew he
 A fight was determined,² since the light of the sun they
 No longer could see, and lowering darkness
 O'er all had descended, and dark under heaven
 Shadowy shapes came shying around them.
 The liegemen all rose then. One saluted the other,
 Hrothgar Beowulf, in rhythmical measures,
 Wishing him well, and, the wassail-hall giving
 To his care and keeping, quoth he departing:

² Kl. suggests a period after 'determined.' This would give the passage as follows: Since they no longer could see the light of the sun, and lowering darkness was down over all, dire under the heavens shadowy beings came going around them.

“Not to any one else have I ever entrusted,
But thee and thee only, the hall of the Danemen,
Since high I could heave my hand and my buckler.
Take thou in charge now the noblest of houses;
Be mindful of honor, exhibiting prowess,
Watch 'gainst the foeman! Thou shalt want no enjoyments, Survive thou safely adventure so glorious!”

XI. ALL SLEEP SAVE ONE

Then Hrothgar departed, his earl-throng attending him,
Folk-lord of Scyldings, forth from the building;
The war-chieftain wished then Wealhtheow to look for,
The queen for a bedmate. To keep away Grendel
The Glory of Kings had given a hall-watch,
As men heard recounted: for the king of the Danemen
He did special service, gave the giant a watcher:
And the prince of the Geatmen implicitly trusted
His warlike strength and the Wielder's protection.
His armor of iron off him he did then,
His helmet from his head, to his henchman committed
His chased-handled chain-sword, choicest of weapons,
And bade him bide with his battle-equipments.
The good one then uttered words of defiance,
Beowulf Geatman, ere his bed he upmounted:
"I hold me no meaner in matters of prowess,
In warlike achievements, than Grendel does himself;
Hence I seek not with sword-edge to sooth him to slumber,
Of life to bereave him, though well I am able.
No battle-skill¹ has he, that blows he should strike me,
To shatter my shield, though sure he is mighty
In strife and destruction; but struggling by night we Shall do without edges, dare he to look for Weaponless warfare, and wise-mooded Father
The glory apportion, God ever-holy,
On which hand soever to him seemeth proper."
Then the brave-mooded hero bent to his slumber,
The pillow received the cheek of the noble;
And many a martial mere-thane attending
Sank to his slumber. Seemed it unlikely
That ever thereafter any should hope to

¹ Gr. understood 'gódra' as meaning 'advantages in battle.' This rendering H.-So. rejects. The latter takes the passage as meaning that Grendel, though mighty and formidable, has no skill in the art of war.

Be happy at home, hero-friends visit
 Or the lordly troop-castle where he lived from his childhood;
 They had heard how slaughter had snatched from the wine-hall,
 Had recently ravished, of the race of the Scyldings
 Too many by far. But the Lord to them granted
 The weaving of war-speed, to Wederish heroes
 Aid and comfort, that every opponent
 By one man's war-might they worsted and vanquished,
 By the might of himself; the truth is established
 That God Almighty hath governed for ages
 Kindreds and nations. A night very lurid
 The trav'ler-at-twilight came tramping and striding.
 The warriors were sleeping who should watch the horned-building,
 One only excepted. 'Mid earthmen 'twas 'stablished,
 Th' implacable foeman was powerless to hurl them
 To the land of shadows, if the Lord were unwilling;
 But serving as warder, in terror to foemen,
 He angrily bided the issue of battle.²

² B. in his masterly articles on Beowulf (P. and B. XII.) rejects the division usually made at this point, 'Pá.' (711), usually rendered 'then,' he translates 'when,' and connects its clause with the foregoing sentence. These changes he makes to reduce the number of 'cóm's' as principal verbs. (Cf. 703, 711, 721.) With all deference to this acute scholar, I must say that it seems to me that the poet is exhausting his resources to bring out clearly the supreme event on which the whole subsequent action turns. First, he (Grendel) came in the wan night; second, he came from the moor; third, he came to the hall. Time, place from which, place to which, are all given.

XII. GRENDEL AND BEOWULF

'Neath the cloudy cliffs came from the moor then Grendel going, God's anger bare he.
 The monster intended some one of earthmen
 In the hall-building grand to entrap and make way with:
 He went under welkin where well he knew of
 The wine-joyous building, brilliant with plating,
 Gold-hall of earthmen. Not the earliest occasion
 He the home and manor of Hrothgar had sought:
 Ne'er found he in life-days later nor earlier
 Hardier hero, hall-thanes¹ more sturdy!
 Then came to the building the warrior marching,
 Bereft of his joyance. The door quickly opened
 On fire-hinges fastened, when his fingers had touched it;
 The fell one had flung then—his fury so bitter—
 Open the entrance. Early thereafter
 The foeman trod the shining hall-pavement,
 Strode he angrily; from the eyes of him glimmered
 A lustre unlovely likest to fire.
 He beheld in the hall the heroes in numbers,
 A circle of kinsmen sleeping together,
 A throng of thanemen: then his thoughts were exultant,
 He minded to sunder from each of the thanemen
 The life from his body, horrible demon,
 Ere morning came, since fate had allowed him
 The prospect of plenty. Providence willed not
 To permit him any more of men under heaven
 To eat in the night-time. Higelac's kinsman
 Great sorrow endured how the dire-mooded creature
 In unlooked-for assaults were likely to bear him.
 No thought had the monster of deferring the matter,

¹ B. and t.B. emend so as to make lines 9 and 10 read: Never in his life, earlier or later, had he, the hell-thane, found a braver hero.—They argue that Beowulf's companions had done nothing to merit such encomiums as the usual readings allow them.

But on earliest occasion he quickly laid hold of A soldier asleep, suddenly tore him,
Bit his bone-prison, the blood drank in currents,
Swallowed in mouthfuls: he soon had the dead man's Feet and hands, too, eaten entirely.
Nearer he strode then, the stout-hearted warrior
Snatched as he slumbered, seizing with hand-grip,
Forward the foeman foined with his hand;
Caught he quickly the cunning deviser,
On his elbow he rested. This early discovered
The master of malice, that in middle-earth's regions,
'Neath the whole of the heavens, no hand-grapple greater
In any man else had he ever encountered:
Fearful in spirit, faint-mooded waxed he,
Not off could betake him; death he was pondering,
Would fly to his covert, seek the devils' assembly:
His calling no more was the same he had followed
Long in his lifetime. The liege-kinsman worthy
Of Higelac minded his speech of the evening,
Stood he up straight and stoutly did seize him.
His fingers crackled; the giant was outward,
The earl stepped farther. The famous one minded
To flee away farther, if he found an occasion,
And off and away, avoiding delay,
To fly to the fen-moors; he fully was ware of
The strength of his grapple in the grip of the foeman.
'Twas an ill-taken journey that the injury-bringing,
Harrying harmer to Heorot wandered:
The palace re-echoed; to all of the Danemen,
Dwellers in castles, to each of the bold ones,
Earlmen, was terror. Angry they both were,
Archwarders raging.² Rattled the building;
'Twas a marvellous wonder that the wine-hall withstood then

² For 'réðe rén-weardas' (771), t.B. suggests 'réðe, rénhearde.' Translate: They were both angry, raging and mighty.

The bold-in-battle, bent not to earthward,
Excellent earth-hall; but within and without it
Was fastened so firmly in fetters of iron,
By the art of the armorer. Off from the sill there
Bent mead-benches many, as men have informed me,
Adorned with gold-work, where the grim ones did struggle.
The Scylding wise men weened ne'er before
That by might and main-strength a man under heaven
Might break it in pieces, bone-decked, resplendent,
Crush it by cunning, unless clutch of the fire
In smoke should consume it. The sound mounted upward
Novel enough; on the North Danes fastened
A terror of anguish, on all of the men there
Who heard from the wall the weeping and plaining,
The song of defeat from the foeman of heaven,
Heard him hymns of horror howl, and his sorrow
Hell-bound bewailing. He held him too firmly
Who was strongest of main-strength of men of that era.

XIII. GRENDEL IS VANQUISHED

For no cause whatever would the earlmen's defender
 Leave in life-joys the loathsome newcomer,
 He deemed his existence utterly useless
 To men under heaven. Many a noble
 Of Beowulf brandished his battle-sword old,
 Would guard the life of his lord and protector,
 The far-famous chieftain, if able to do so;
 While waging the warfare, this wist they but little,
 Brave battle-thanes, while his body intending o slit into slivers, and seeking his spirit:
 That the relentless foeman nor finest of weapons
 Of all on the earth, nor any of war-bills
 Was willing to injure; but weapons of victory
 Swords and suchlike he had sworn to dispense with.
 His death at that time must prove to be wretched,
 And the far-away spirit widely should journey
 Into enemies' power. This plainly he saw then
 Who with mirth¹ of mood malice no little
 Had wrought in the past on the race of the earthmen
 (To God he was hostile), that his body would fail him,
 But Higelac's hardy henchman and kinsman
 Held him by the hand; hateful to other
 Was each one if living. A body-wound suffered
 The direful demon, damage incurable
 Was seen on his shoulder, his sinews were shivered,
 His body did burst. To Beowulf was given Glory in battle; Grendel from thenceward
 Must flee and hide him in the fen-cliffs and marshes, Sick unto death, his dwelling must look for Unwinsome and woful; he wist the more fully

¹ It has been proposed to translate 'myrðe' by with sorrow; but there seems no authority for such a rendering. To the present translator, the phrase 'módes myrðe' seems a mere padding for gladly; i.e., he who gladly harassed mankind.

The end of his earthly existence was nearing,
His life-days' limits. At last for the Danemen,
When the slaughter was over, their wish was accomplished.
The comer-from-far-land had cleansed then of evil,
Wise and valiant, the war-hall of Hrothgar,
Saved it from violence. He joyed in the night-work,
In repute for prowess; the prince of the Geatmen
For the East-Danish people his boast had accomplished, Bettered their burdensome bale-sorrows fully,
The craft-begot evil they erstwhile had suffered
And were forced to endure from crushing oppression,
Their manifold misery. 'Twas a manifest token,
When the hero-in-battle the hand suspended,
The arm and the shoulder (there was all of the claw
Of Grendel together) 'neath great-stretching hall-roof.

XIV. REJOICING OF THE DANES

In the mist of the morning many a warrior
 Stood round the gift-hall, as the story is told me:
 Folk-princes fared then from far and from near Through long-stretching journeys to look at the wonder,
 The footprints of the foeman. Few of the warriors
 Who gazed on the foot-tracks of the inglorious creature
 His parting from life pained very deeply,
 How, weary in spirit, off from those regions
 In combats conquered he carried his traces,
 Fated and flying, to the flood of the nickers.
 There in bloody billows bubbled the currents,
 The angry eddy was everywhere mingled
 And seething with gore, welling with sword-blood;¹
 He death-doomed had hid him, when reaved of his joyance
 He laid down his life in the lair he had fled to,
 His heathenish spirit, where hell did receive him.
 Thence the friends from of old backward turned them,
 And many a youngster from merry adventure,
 Striding their stallions, stout from the seaward,
 Heroes on horses. There were heard very often
 Beowulf's praises; many often asserted
 That neither south nor north, in the circuit of waters,
 O'er outstretching earth-plain, none other was better
 'Mid bearers of war-shields, more worthy to govern,
 'Neath the arch of the ether. Not any, however,
 'Gainst the friend-lord muttered, mocking-words uttered
 Of Hrothgar the gracious (a good king he).
 Oft the famed ones permitted their fallow-skinned horses
 To run in rivalry, racing and chasing,
 Where the fieldways appeared to them fair and inviting,

¹ S. emends, suggesting 'déop' for 'déog,' and removing semicolon after 'wéol.' The two half-lines 'welling ... hid him' would then read: The bloody deep welled with sword-gore. B. accepts 'déop' for 'déog,' but reads 'déað-fæges': The deep boiled with the sword-gore of the death-doomed one.

Known for their excellence; oft a thane of the folk-lord,² ³A man of celebrity, mindful of rhythms,
 Who ancient traditions treasured in memory,
 New word-groups found properly bound:
 The bard after 'gan then Beowulf's venture
 Wisely to tell of, and words that were clever
 To utter skilfully, earnestly speaking,
 Everything told he that he heard as to Sigmund's
 Mighty achievements, many things hidden,
 The strife of the Wælsing, the wide-going ventures
 The children of men knew of but little,
 The feud and the fury, but Fitela with him,
 When suchlike matters he minded to speak of,
 Uncle to nephew, as in every contention
 Each to other was ever devoted:
 A numerous host of the race of the scathers
 They had slain with the sword-edge. To Sigmund accrued then
 No little of glory, when his life-days were over,
 Since he sturdy in struggle had destroyed the great dragon,
 The hoard-treasure's keeper; 'neath the hoar-grayish stone he,
 The son of the atheling, unaided adventured
 The perilous project; not present was Fitela,
 Yet the fortune befell him of forcing his weapon
 Through the marvellous dragon, that it stood in the wall,
 Well-honored weapon; the worm was slaughtered.
 The great one had gained then by his glorious achievement
 To reap from the ring-hoard richest enjoyment,
 As best it did please him: his vessel he loaded,
 Shining ornaments on the ship's bosom carried,
 Kinsman of Wæls: the drake in heat melted.
 He was farthest famed of fugitive pilgrims,

² Another and quite different rendering of this passage is as follows: Oft a liegeman of the king, a fame-covered man mindful of songs, who very many ancient traditions remembered (he found other word-groups accurately bound together) began afterward to tell of Beowulf's adventure, skilfully to narrate it, etc.

³ Might 'guma gilp-hladen' mean 'a man laden with boasts of the deeds of others'?

Mid wide-scattered world-folk, for works of great prowess,
 War-troopers' shelter: hence waxed he in honor.⁴
 Afterward Heremod's hero-strength failed him,
 His vigor and valor. 'Mid venomous haters
 To the hands of foemen he was foully delivered,
 Offdriven early. Agony-billows
 Oppressed him too long, to his people he became then,
 To all the athelings, an ever-great burden;
 And the daring one's journey in days of yore
 Many wise men were wont to deplore,
 Such as hoped he would bring them help in their sorrow,
 That the son of their ruler should rise into power,
 Holding the headship held by his fathers,
 Should govern the people, the gold-hoard and borough,
 The kingdom of heroes, the realm of the Scyldings.
 He to all men became then far more beloved,
 Higelac's kinsman, to kindreds and races,
 To his friends much dearer; him malice assaulted.—
 Oft running and racing on roadsters they measured
 The dun-colored highways. Then the light of the morning
 Was hurried and hastened. Went henchmen in numbers
 To the beautiful building, bold ones in spirit,
 To look at the wonder; the liegelord himself then
 From his wife-bower wending, warden of treasures,
 Glorious trod with troopers unnumbered,
 Famed for his virtues, and with him the queen-wife
 Measured the mead-ways, with maidens attending.

⁴ t.B. accepts B.'s 'hé þæs áron páh' as given by H.-So., but puts a comma after 'páh,' and takes 'siððan' as introducing a dependent clause: He throve in honor since Heremod's strength ... had decreased.

XV. HROTHGAR'S GRATITUDE

Hrothgar discoursed (to the hall-building went he,
 He stood by the pillar,¹ saw the steep-rising hall-roof Gleaming with gold-gems, and Grendel his hand there):
 "For the sight we behold now, thanks to the Wielder
 Early be offered! Much evil I bided,
 Snaring from Grendel:² God can e'er 'complish
 Wonder on wonder, Wielder of Glory!
 But lately I reckoned ne'er under heaven
 Comfort to gain me for any of sorrows,
 While the handsomest of houses horrid with bloodstain
 Gory uptowered; grief had offfrightened³
 Each of the wise ones who weened not that ever
 The folk-troop's defences 'gainst foes they should strengthen,
 'Gainst sprites and monsters. Through the might of the Wielder
 A doughty retainer hath a deed now accomplished
 Which erstwhile we all with our excellent wisdom
 Failed to perform. May affirm very truly
 What woman soever in all of the nations
 Gave birth to the child, if yet she surviveth,
 That the long-ruling Lord was lavish to herward
 In the birth of the bairn. Now, Beowulf dear,
 Most excellent hero, I'll love thee in spirit
 As bairn of my body; bear well henceforward
 The relationship new. No lack shall befall thee
 Of earth-joys any I ever can give thee.
 Full often for lesser service I've given
 Hero less hardy hoard-treasure precious,
 To a weaker in war-strife. By works of distinction
 Thou hast gained for thyself now that thy glory shall flourish

¹ B. and t.B. read 'stapole,' and translate stood on the floor.

² For 'snaring from Grendel,' 'sorrows at Grendel's hands' has been suggested. This gives a parallel to 'láoðes.' 'Grynna' may well be gen. pl. of 'gyrn,' by a scribal slip.

³ The H.-So punctuation has been followed; but B. has been followed in understanding 'gehwyrcne' as object of 'wid-scofen (hæfde).' Gr. construes 'wéa' as nom abs.

Forever and ever. The All-Ruler quite thee
With good from His hand as He hitherto did thee!"

Beowulf answered, Ecgtheow's offspring:
"That labor of glory most gladly achieved we,
The combat accomplished, unquailing we ventured
The enemy's grapple; I would grant it much rather Thou wert able to look at the creature in person,
Faint unto falling, the foe in his trappings!
On murder-bed quickly I minded to bind him,
With firm-holding fetters, that forced by my grapple
Low he should lie in life-and-death struggle
'Less his body escape; I was wholly unable,
Since God did not will it, to keep him from going,
Not held him that firmly, hated opposer;
Too swift was the foeman. Yet safety regarding
He suffered his hand behind him to linger,
His arm and shoulder, to act as watcher;
No shadow of solace the woe-begone creature
Found him there nathless: the hated destroyer
Liveth no longer, lashed for his evils,
But sorrow hath seized him, in snare-meshes hath him
Close in its clutches, keepeth him writhing
In baleful bonds: there banished for evil
The man shall wait for the mighty tribunal,
How the God of glory shall give him his earnings."

Then the soldier kept silent, son of old Ecglaf,
From boasting and bragging of battle-achievements,
Since the princes beheld there the hand that depended
'Neath the lofty hall-timbers by the might of the nobleman,
Each one before him, the enemy's fingers;
Each finger-nail strong steel most resembled,
The heathen one's hand-spur, the hero-in-battle's
Claw most uncanny; quoth they agreeing,
That not any excellent edges of brave ones
Was willing to touch him, the terrible creature's

Battle-hand bloody to bear away from him.

XVI. HROTHGAR LAVISHES GIFTS UPON HIS DELIVERER

Then straight was ordered that Heorot inside¹
 With hands be embellished: a host of them gathered,
 Of men and women, who the wassailing-building
 The guest-hall begeared. Gold-flashing sparkled Webs on the walls then, of wonders a many
 To each of the heroes that look on such objects.
 The beautiful building was broken to pieces
 Which all within with irons was fastened,
 Its hinges torn off: only the roof was Whole and uninjured when the horrible creature
 Outlawed for evil off had betaken him,
 Hopeless of living. 'Tis hard to avoid it
 (Whoever will do it!); but he doubtless must come to²
 The place awaiting, as Wyrð hath appointed,
 Soul-bearers, earth-dwellers, earls under heaven,
 Where bound on its bed his body shall slumber
 When feasting is finished. Full was the time then
 That the son of Healfdene went to the building;
 The excellent atheling would eat of the banquet.
 Ne'er heard I that people with hero-band larger Bare them better tow'rds their bracelet-bestower.
 The laden-with-glory stooped to the bench then (Their kinsmen-companions in plenty were joyful, Many a cupful quaffing complaisantly),
 Doughty of spirit in the high-tow'ring palace,
 Hrothgar and Hrothulf. Heorot then inside

² The passage 1005-1009 seems to be hopeless. One difficult point is to find a subject for 'gesacan.' Some say 'he'; others supply 'each,' i.e., every soul-bearer ... must gain the inevitable place. The genitives in this case are partitive.—If 'he' be subj., the genitives are dependent on 'gearwe' (= prepared).—The 'he' itself is disputed, some referring it to Grendel; but B. takes it as involved in the parenthesis.

Was filled with friendly ones; falsehood and treachery
The Folk-Scyldings now nowise did practise.
Then the offspring of Healfdene offered to Beowulf
A golden standard, as reward for the victory,
A banner embossed, burnie and helmet;
Many men saw then a song-famous weapon Borne 'fore the hero. Beowulf drank of
The cup in the building; that treasure-bestowing
He needed not blush for in battle-men's presence.
Ne'er heard I that many men on the ale-bench
In friendlier fashion to their fellows presented
Four bright jewels with gold-work embellished.
'Round the roof of the helmet a head-guarder outside Braided with wires, with bosses was furnished,
That swords-for-the-battle fight-hardened might fail
Boldly to harm him, when the hero proceeded
Forth against foemen. The defender of earls then Commanded that eight steeds with bridles
Gold-plated, gleaming, be guided to hallward,
Inside the building; on one of them stood then
An art-broidered saddle embellished with jewels;
'Twas the sovereign's seat, when the son of King Healfdene
Was pleased to take part in the play of the edges;
The famous one's valor ne'er failed at the front when Slain ones were bowing. And to Beowulf granted
The prince of the Ingwins, power over both,
O'er war-steeds and weapons; bade him well to enjoy them.
In so manly a manner the mighty-famed chieftain,
Hoard-ward of heroes, with horses and jewels
War-storms requited, that none e'er condemneth
Who willeth to tell truth with full justice.

XVII. BANQUET (CONTINUED).—THE SCOP'S SONG OF FINN AND HNÆF

And the atheling of earlmen to each of the heroes
Who the ways of the waters went with Beowulf,
A costly gift-token gave on the mead-bench,
Offered an heirloom, and ordered that that man
With gold should be paid for, whom Grendel had erstwhile
Wickedly slaughtered, as he more of them had done
Had far-seeing God and the mood of the hero
The fate not averted: the Father then governed
All of the earth-dwellers, as He ever is doing;
Hence insight for all men is everywhere fittest,
Forethought of spirit! much he shall suffer
Of lief and of loathsome who long in this present
Useth the world in this woful existence.
There was music and merriment mingling together
Touching Healfdene's leader; the joy-wood was fingered,
Measures recited, when the singer of Hrothgar
On mead-bench should mention the merry hall-joyance
Of the kinsmen of Finn, when onset surprised them:
"The Half-Danish hero, Hnæf of the Scyldings,
On the field of the Frisians was fated to perish.
Sure Hildeburg needed not mention approving
The faith of the Jutemen: though blameless entirely,
When shields were shivered she was shorn of her darlings,
Of bairns and brothers: they bent to their fate
With war-spear wounded; woe was that woman.
Not causeless lamented the daughter of Hoce
The decree of the Wielder when morning-light came and
She was able 'neath heaven to behold the destruction
Of brothers and bairns, where the brightest of earth-joys
She had hitherto had: all the henchmen of Finn
War had oftaken, save a handful remaining,

That he nowise was able to offer resistance¹
 To the onset of Hengest in the parley of battle,
 Nor the wretched remnant to rescue in war from
 The earl of the atheling; but they offered conditions,
 Another great building to fully make ready,
 A hall and a high-seat, that half they might rule with
 The sons of the Jutemen, and that Folcwalda's son would Day after day the Danemen honor
 When gifts were giving, and grant of his ring-store
 To Hengest's earl-troop ever so freely,
 Of his gold-plated jewels, as he encouraged the Frisians
 On the bench of the beer-hall. On both sides they swore then
 A fast-binding compact; Finn unto Hengest
 With no thought of revoking vowed then most solemnly
 The woe-begone remnant well to take charge of,
 His Witan advising; the agreement should no one
 By words or works weaken and shatter,
 By artifice ever injure its value,
 Though reaved of their ruler their ring-giver's slayer
 They followed as vassals, Fate so requiring:
 Then if one of the Frisians the quarrel should speak of
 In tones that were taunting, terrible edges
 Should cut in requital. Accomplished the oath was,
 And treasure of gold from the hoard was uplifted.
 The best of the Scylding braves was then fully Prepared for the pile; at the pyre was seen clearly
 The blood-gory burnie, the boar with his gilding,
 The iron-hard swine, athelings many Fatally wounded; no few had been slaughtered.
 Hildeburg bade then, at the burning of Hnæf,
 The bairn of her bosom to bear to the fire,
 That his body be burned and borne to the pyre.
 The woe-stricken woman wept on his shoulder,²

In measures lamented; upmounted the hero.³
The greatest of dead-fires curled to the welkin,
On the hill's-front crackled; heads were a-melting,
Wound-doors bursting, while the blood was a-coursing
From body-bite fierce. The fire devoured them,
Greediest of spirits, whom war had offcarried
From both of the peoples; their bravest were fallen.

² The separation of adjective and noun by a phrase (cf. v. 1118) being very unusual, some scholars have put 'earme on eaxe' with the foregoing lines, inserting a semicolon after 'eaxe.' In this case 'on eaxe' (i.e., on the ashes, cinders) is sometimes read, and this affords a parallel to 'on bæl.' Let us hope that a satisfactory rendering shall yet be reached without resorting to any tampering with the text, such as Lichtenheld proposed: 'earme ides on eaxe gnornode.'

³ For 'gúð-rinc,' 'gúð-réc,' battle-smoke, has been suggested.

XVIII. THE FINN EPISODE (CONTINUED).—THE BANQUET CONTINUES

"Then the warriors departed to go to their dwellings,
 Reaved of their friends, Friesland to visit,
 Their homes and high-city. Hengest continued
 Biding with Finn the blood-tainted winter, Wholly unsundered;¹ of fatherland thought he Though unable to drive the ring-stemmed vessel
 O'er the ways of the waters; the wave-deeps were tossing,
 Fought with the wind; winter in ice-bonds
 Closed up the currents, till there came to the dwelling
 A year in its course, as yet it revolveth,
 If season propitious one alway regardeth,
 World-cheering weathers. Then winter was gone,
 Earth's bosom was lovely; the exile would get him,
 The guest from the palace; on grewsomest vengeance
 He brooded more eager than on oversea journeys,
 Whe'r onset-of-anger he were able to 'complish,
 The bairns of the Jutemen therein to remember.
 Nowise refused he the duties of liegeman
 When Hun of the Frisians the battle-sword Láfing,
 Fairest of falchions, friendly did give him:
 Its edges were famous in folk-talk of Jutland.
 And savage sword-fury seized in its clutches
 Bold-mooded Finn where he bode in his palace,
 When the grewsome grapple Guthlaf and Oslaf
 Had mournfully mentioned, the mere-journey over,
 For sorrows half-blamed him; the flickering spirit
 Could not bide in his bosom. Then the building was covered²

¹ For 1130 (1) R. and Gr. suggest 'elne unflitme' as 1098 (1) reads. The latter verse is undisputed; and, for the former, 'elne' would be as possible as 'ealles,' and 'unflitme' is well supported. Accepting 'elne unflitme' for both, I would suggest 'very peaceably' for both places: (1) Finn to Hengest very peaceably vowed with oaths, etc. (2) Hengest then still the slaughter-stained winter remained there with Finn very peaceably. The two passages become thus correlatives, the second a sequel of the first. 'Elne,' in the sense of very (swíðe), needs no argument; and 'unflitme' (from 'flítan') can, it seems to me, be more plausibly rendered 'peaceful,' 'peaceable,' than 'contestable,' or 'conquerable.'

With corpses of foemen, and Finn too was slaughtered,
 The king with his comrades, and the queen made a prisoner.
 The troops of the Scyldings bore to their vessels
 All that the land-king had in his palace,
 Such trinkets and treasures they took as, on searching,
 At Finn's they could find. They ferried to Daneland
 The excellent woman on oversea journey,
 Led her to their land-folk." The lay was concluded,
 The gleeman's recital. Shouts again rose then,
 Bench-glee resounded, bearers then offered
 Wine from wonder-vats. Wealhtheo advanced then Going 'neath gold-crown, where the good ones were seated
 Uncle and nephew; their peace was yet mutual,
 True each to the other. And Unferth the spokesman
 Sat at the feet of the lord of the Scyldings:
 Each trusted his spirit that his mood was courageous,
 Though at fight he had failed in faith to his kinsmen.
 Said the queen of the Scyldings: "My lord and protector,
 Treasure-bestower, take thou this beaker;
 Joyance attend thee, gold-friend of heroes,
 And greet thou the Geatmen with gracious responses!
 So ought one to do. Be kind to the Geatmen,
 In gifts not niggardly; anear and afar now
 Peace thou enjoyest. Report hath informed me
 Thou'lt have for a bairn the battle-brave hero.
 Now is Heorot cleansèd, ring-palace gleaming;
 Give while thou mayest many rewards,
 And bequeath to thy kinsmen kingdom and people,
 On wending thy way to the Wielder's splendor.
 I know good Hrothulf, that the noble young troopers
 He'll care for and honor, lord of the Scyldings,
 If earth-joys thou endest earlier than he doth;
 I reckon that recompense he'll render with kindness

² Some scholars have proposed 'roden'; the line would then read: Then the building was reddened, etc., instead of 'covered.' The 'h' may have been carried over from the three alliterating 'h's.'

Our offspring and issue, if that all he remember,
What favors of yore, when he yet was an infant,
We awarded to him for his worship and pleasure.”
Then she turned by the bench where her sons were carousing,
Hrethric and Hrothmund, and the heroes’ offspring,
The war-youth together; there the good one was sitting
’Twixt the brothers twain, Beowulf Geatman.

XIX. BEOWULF RECEIVES FURTHER HONOR

A beaker was borne him, and bidding to quaff it
 Graciously given, and gold that was twisted
 Pleasantly proffered, a pair of arm-jewels,
 Rings and corslet, of collars the greatest I've heard of 'neath heaven. Of heroes not any More splendid from jewels have I heard 'neath the welkin,
 Since Hama off bore the Brosingmen's necklace,
 The bracteates and jewels, from the bright-shining city,¹ Eormenric's cunning craftiness fled from,
 Chose gain everlasting. Geatish Higelac,
 Grandson of Swerting, last had this jewel
 When tramping 'neath banner the treasure he guarded,
 The field-spoil defended; Fate offcarried him
 When for deeds of daring he endured tribulation, Hate from the Frisians; the ornaments bare he O'er the cup of the currents, costly gem-treasures,
 Mighty folk-leader, he fell 'neath his target;
 The² corpse of the king then came into charge of The race of the Frankmen, the mail-shirt and collar:
 Warmen less noble plundered the fallen,
 When the fight was finished; the folk of the Geatmen
 The field of the dead held in possession.
 The choicest of mead-halls with cheering resounded.
 Wealhtheo discoursed, the war-troop addressed she:
 "This collar enjoy thou, Beowulf worthy,
 Young man, in safety, and use thou this armor,
 Gems of the people, and prosper thou fully,
 Show thyself sturdy and be to these liegemen
 Mild with instruction! I'll mind thy requital.
 Thou hast brought it to pass that far and near

¹ C. suggests a semicolon after 'city,' with 'he' as supplied subject of 'fled' and 'chose.'

² For 'feorh' S. suggests 'feoh': 'corpse' in the translation would then be changed to 'possessions,' 'belongings.' This is a better reading than one joining, in such intimate syntactical relations, things so unlike as 'corpse' and 'jewels.'

Forever and ever earthmen shall honor thee,
 Even so widely as ocean surroundeth
 The blustering bluffs. Be, while thou livest,
 A wealth-blessèd atheling. I wish thee most truly
 Jewels and treasure. Be kind to my son, thou
 Living in joyance! Here each of the nobles
 Is true unto other, gentle in spirit,
 Loyal to leader. The liegemen are peaceful,
 The war-troops ready: well-drunken heroes,³
 Do as I bid ye." Then she went to the settle.
 There was choicest of banquets, wine drank the heroes:
 Weird they knew not, destiny cruel,
 As to many an earlman early it happened,
 When evening had come and Hrothgar had parted
 Off to his manor, the mighty to slumber.
 Warriors unnumbered warded the building
 As erst they did often: the ale-settle bared they,
 'Twas covered all over with beds and pillows.
 Doomed unto death, down to his slumber
 Bowed then a beer-thane. Their battle-shields placed they,
 Bright-shining targets, up by their heads then;
 O'er the atheling on ale-bench 'twas easy to see there
 Battle-high helmet, burnie of ring-mail,
 And mighty war-spear. 'Twas the wont of that people
 To constantly keep them equipped for the battle,⁴
 At home or marching—in either condition—
 At seasons just such as necessity ordered
 As best for their ruler; that people was worthy.

³ S. suggests 'wine-joyous heroes,' 'warriors elated with wine.'

⁴ I believe this translation brings out the meaning of the poet, without departing seriously from the H.-So. text. 'Of' frequently means 'constantly,' 'continually,' not always 'often.'—Why 'an (on) wīg gearwe' should be written 'ánwīg-gearwe' (= ready for single combat), I cannot see. 'Gearwe' occurs quite frequently with 'on'; cf. B. 1110 (ready for the pyre), El. 222 (ready for the glad journey). Moreover, what has the idea of single combat to do with B. 1247 ff.? The poet is giving an inventory of the arms and armor which they lay aside on retiring, and he closes his narration by saying that they were always prepared for battle both at home and on the march.

XX. THE MOTHER OF GRENDEL

They sank then to slumber. With sorrow one paid for His evening repose, as often betid them
 While Grendel was holding¹ the gold-bedecked palace,
 Ill-deeds performing, till his end overtook him,
 Death for his sins. 'Twas seen very clearly,
 Known unto earth-folk, that still an avenger
 Outlived the loathed one, long since the sorrow
 Caused by the struggle; the mother of Grendel,
 Devil-shaped woman, her woe ever minded,
 Who was held to inhabit the horrible waters,
 The cold-flowing currents, after Cain had become a
 Slayer-with-edges to his one only brother,
 The son of his sire; he set out then banished,
 Marked as a murderer, man-joys avoiding,
 Lived in the desert. Thence demons unnumbered
 Fate-sent awoke; one of them Grendel,
 Sword-cursèd, hateful, who at Heorot met with
 A man that was watching, waiting the struggle,
 Where a horrid one held him with hand-grapple sturdy;
 Nathless he minded the might of his body,
 The glorious gift God had allowed him,
 And folk-ruling Father's favor relied on,
 His help and His comfort: so he conquered the foeman,
 The hell-spirit humbled: he unhappy departed then,
 Reaved of his joyance, journeying to death-haunts, Foeman of man. His mother moreover Eager and gloomy was anxious to go on
 Her mournful mission, mindful of vengeance
 For the death of her son. She came then to Heorot
 Where the Armor-Dane earlmen all through the building
 Were lying in slumber. Soon there became then

¹ Several eminent authorities either read or emend the MS. so as to make this verse read, While Grendel was wasting the gold-bedecked palace. So 20 15 below: ravaged the desert.

Return² to the nobles, when the mother of Grendel
 Entered the folk-hall; the fear was less grievous
 By even so much as the vigor of maidens,
 War-strength of women, by warrior is reckoned,
 When well-carved weapon, worked with the hammer,
 Blade very bloody, brave with its edges,
 Strikes down the boar-sign that stands on the helmet.
 Then the hard-edged weapon was heaved in the building,³
 The brand o'er the benches, broad-lindens many Hand-fast were lifted; for helmet he recked not,
 For armor-net broad, whom terror laid hold of.
 She went then hastily, outward would get her
 Her life for to save, when some one did spy her;
 Soon she had grappled one of the athelings
 Fast and firmly, when fenward she hied her;
 That one to Hrothgar was liefest of heroes
 In rank of retainer where waters encircle,
 A mighty shield-warrior, whom she murdered at slumber,
 A broadly-famed battle-knight. Beowulf was absent,
 But another apartment was erstwhile devoted
 To the glory-decked Geatman when gold was distributed.
 There was hubbub in Heorot. The hand that was famous She grasped in its gore;⁴ grief was renewed then
 In homes and houses: 'twas no happy arrangement
 In both of the quarters to barter and purchase
 With lives of their friends. Then the well-aged ruler,
 The gray-headed war-thane, was woful in spirit,
 When his long-trusted liegeman lifeless he knew of,

² For 'sóna' (1281), t.B. suggests 'sára,' limiting 'edhwyrft.' Read then: Return of sorrows to the nobles, etc. This emendation supplies the syntactical gap after 'edhwyrft.'

⁴ B. suggests 'under hróf genam' (v. 1303). This emendation, as well as an emendation with (?) to v. 739, he offers, because 'under' baffles him in both passages. All we need is to take 'under' in its secondary meaning of 'in,' which, though not given by Grein, occurs in the literature. Cf. Chron. 876 (March's A.-S. Gram. § 355) and Oro. Amaz. l. 10, where 'under' = in the midst of. Cf. modern Eng. 'in such circumstances,' which interchanges in good usage with 'under such circumstances.'

His dearest one gone. Quick from a room was Beowulf brought, brave and triumphant.
As day was dawning in the dusk of the morning,
Went then that earlman, champion noble,
Came with comrades, where the clever one bided
Whether God all gracious would grant him a respite
After the woe he had suffered. The war-worthy hero
With a troop of retainers trod then the pavement
(The hall-building groaned), till he greeted the wise one,
The earl of the Ingwins;⁵ asked if the night had Fully refreshed him, as fain he would have it.

⁵ For 'néod-laðu' (1321) C. suggests 'néad-láðum,' and translates: asked whether the night had been pleasant to him after crushing-hostility.

XXI. HROTHGAR'S ACCOUNT OF THE MONSTERS

Hrothgar rejoined, helm of the Scyldings:

"Ask not of joyance! Grief is renewed to
 The folk of the Danemen. Dead is Æschere, Yrmenlaf's brother, older than he,
 My true-hearted counsellor, trusty adviser,
 Shoulder-companion, when fighting in battle
 Our heads we protected, when troopers were clashing,
 And heroes were dashing; such an earl should be ever,
 An erst-worthy atheling, as Æschere proved him.
 The flickering death-spirit became in Heorot
 His hand-to-hand murderer; I can not tell whither
 The cruel one turned in the carcass exulting,
 By cramming discovered.¹ The quarrel she wreaked then,
 That last night igone Grendel thou killedst
 In grewsomest manner, with grim-holding clutches,
 Since too long he had lessened my liege-troop and wasted
 My folk-men so foully. He fell in the battle
 With forfeit of life, and another has followed,
 A mighty crime-worker, her kinsman avenging,
 And henceforth hath 'stablished her hatred unyielding,²
 As it well may appear to many a liegeman,
 Who mourneth in spirit the treasure-bestower,
 Her heavy heart-sorrow; the hand is now lifeless
 Which³ availed you in every wish that you cherished.
 Land-people heard I, liegemen, this saying,
 Dwellers in halls, they had seen very often
 A pair of such mighty march-striding creatures,
 Far-dwelling spirits, holding the moorlands:
 One of them wore, as well they might notice,

¹ For 'gefrægnod' (1334), K. and t.B. suggest 'gefægnod,' rendering 'rejoicing in her fill.' This gives a parallel to 'æse wlanc' (1333).

² The line 'And ... yielding,' B. renders: And she has performed a deed of blood-vengeance whose effect is far-reaching.

³ 'Sé þe' (1345) is an instance of masc. rel. with fem. antecedent. So v. 1888, where 'sé þe' refers to 'yldo.'

The image of woman, the other one wretched
 In guise of a man wandered in exile,
 Except he was huger than any of earthmen;
 Earth-dwelling people entitled him Grendel
 In days of yore: they know not their father,
 Whe'r ill-going spirits any were borne him
 Ever before. They guard the wolf-coverts,
 Lands inaccessible, wind-beaten nesses,
 Fearfullest fen-deeps, where a flood from the mountains
 'Neath mists of the nesses netherward rattles,
 The stream under earth: not far is it henceward
 Measured by mile-lengths that the mere-water standeth, Which forests hang over, with frost-whiting covered,⁴
 A firm-rooted forest, the floods overshadow.
 There ever at night one an ill-meaning portent
 A fire-flood may see; 'mong children of men
 None liveth so wise that wot of the bottom;
 Though harassed by hounds the heath-stepper seek for,
 Fly to the forest, firm-antlered he-deer,
 Spurred from afar, his spirit he yieldeth,
 His life on the shore, ere in he will venture
 To cover his head. Uncanny the place is:
 Thence upward ascendeth the surging of waters,
 Wan to the welkin, when the wind is stirring
 The weathers unpleasing, till the air groweth gloomy,
 And the heavens lower. Now is help to be gotten From thee and thee only! The abode thou know'st not,
 The dangerous place where thou'rt able to meet with
 The sin-laden hero: seek if thou darest!
 For the feud I will fully fee thee with money,
 With old-time treasure, as erstwhile I did thee,
 With well-twisted jewels, if away thou shalt get thee."

⁴ For 'hrimge' in the H.-So. edition, Gr. and others read 'hrinde' (=hrínende), and translate: which rustling forests overhang.

XXII. BEOWULF SEEKS GRENDEL'S MOTHER

Beowulf answered, Ecgtheow's son:

"Grieve not, O wise one! for each it is better,
His friend to avenge than with vehemence wail him;
Each of us must the end-day abide of
His earthly existence; who is able accomplish
Glory ere death! To battle-thane noble
Lifeless lying, 'tis at last most fitting.
Arise, O king, quick let us hasten
To look at the footprint of the kinsman of Grendel!
I promise thee this now: to his place he'll escape not,
To embrace of the earth, nor to mountainous forest,
Nor to depths of the ocean, wherever he wanders.
Practice thou now patient endurance
Of each of thy sorrows, as I hope for thee soothly!"
Then up sprang the old one, the All-Wielder thanked he,
Ruler Almighty, that the man had outspoken.
Then for Hrothgar a war-horse was decked with a bridle,
Curly-maned courser. The clever folk-leader
Stately proceeded: stepped then an earl-troop
Of linden-wood bearers. Her footprints were seen then Widely in wood-paths, her way o'er the bottoms,
Where she faraway fared o'er fen-country murky,
Bore away breathless the best of retainers
Who pondered with Hrothgar the welfare of country.
The son of the athelings then went o'er the stony,
Declivitous cliffs, the close-covered passes,
Narrow passages, paths unfrequented,
Nesses abrupt, nicker-haunts many;
One of a few of wise-mooded heroes,
He onward advanced to view the surroundings,
Till he found unawares woods of the mountain
O'er hoar-stones hanging, holt-wood unjoyful;
The water stood under, welling and gory.

'Twas irksome in spirit to all of the Danemen,
Friends of the Scyldings, to many a liegeman
Sad to be suffered, a sorrow unlittle
To each of the earlmen, when to Æschere's head they Came on the cliff. The current was seething
With blood and with gore (the troopers gazed on it).
The horn anon sang the battle-song ready.
The troop were all seated; they saw 'long the water then
Many a serpent, mere-dragons wondrous
Trying the waters, nickers a-lying
On the cliffs of the nesses, which at noonday full often Go on the sea-deeps their sorrowful journey,
Wild-beasts and wormkind; away then they hastened
Hot-mooded, hateful, they heard the great clamor,
The war-trumpet winding. One did the Geat-prince
Sunder from earth-joys, with arrow from bowstring,
From his sea-struggle tore him, that the trusty war-missile
Pierced to his vitals; he proved in the currents
Less doughty at swimming whom death had offcarried.
Soon in the waters the wonderful swimmer
Was straitened most sorely with sword-pointed boar-spears,
Pressed in the battle and pulled to the cliff-edge;
The liegemen then looked on the loath-fashioned stranger.
Beowulf donned then his battle-equipments,
Cared little for life; inlaid and most ample,
The hand-woven corslet which could cover his body,
Must the wave-deeps explore, that war might be powerless
To harm the great hero, and the hating one's grasp might Not peril his safety; his head was protected
By the light-flashing helmet that should mix with the bottoms,
Trying the eddies, treasure-emblazoned,
Encircled with jewels, as in seasons long past
The weapon-smith worked it, wondrously made it,
With swine-bodies fashioned it, that thenceforward no longer
Brand might bite it, and battle-sword hurt it.

And that was not least of helpers in prowess
That Hrothgar's spokesman had lent him when straitened;
And the hilted hand-sword was Hrunting entitled,
Old and most excellent 'mong all of the treasures;
Its blade was of iron, blotted with poison,
Hardened with gore; it failed not in battle
Any hero under heaven in hand who it brandished,
Who ventured to take the terrible journeys,
The battle-field sought; not the earliest occasion
That deeds of daring 'twas destined to 'complish.
Ecglaf's kinsman minded not soothly,
Exulting in strength, what erst he had spoken
Drunken with wine, when the weapon he lent to A sword-hero bolder; himself did not venture
'Neath the strife of the currents his life to endanger,
To fame-deeds perform; there he forfeited glory,
Repute for his strength. Not so with the other
When he clad in his corslet had equipped him for battle.

XXIII. BEOWULF'S FIGHT WITH GRENDEL'S MOTHER

Beowulf spake, Ecgtheow's son:

"Recall now, oh, famous kinsman of Healfdene,
 Prince very prudent, now to part I am ready,
 Gold-friend of earlmen, what erst we agreed on,
 Should I lay down my life in lending thee assistance,
 When my earth-joys were over, thou wouldst evermore serve me
 In stead of a father; my faithful thanemen,
 My trusty retainers, protect thou and care for,
 Fall I in battle: and, Hrothgar beloved,
 Send unto Higelac the high-valued jewels
 Thou to me hast allotted. The lord of the Geatmen
 May perceive from the gold, the Hrethling may see it
 When he looks on the jewels, that a gem-giver found I Good over-measure, enjoyed him while able.
 And the ancient heirloom Unferth permit thou,
 The famed one to have, the heavy-sword splendid¹
 The hard-edged weapon; with Hrunting to aid me,
 I shall gain me glory, or grim-death shall take me."
 The atheling of Geatmen uttered these words and Heroic did hasten, not any rejoinder
 Was willing to wait for; the wave-current swallowed
 The doughty-in-battle. Then a day's-length elapsed ere
 He was able to see the sea at its bottom.
 Early she found then who fifty of winters
 The course of the currents kept in her fury,
 Grisly and greedy, that the grim one's dominion
 Some one of men from above was exploring.
 Forth did she grab them, grappled the warrior
 With horrible clutches; yet no sooner she injured
 His body unscathed: the burnie out-guarded,

¹ Kl. emends 'wæl-sweord.' The half-line would then read, 'the battle-sword splendid.'—For 'heard-ecg' in next half-verse, see note to 20 39 above.

That she proved but powerless to pierce through the armor,
The limb-mail locked, with loath-grabbing fingers.
The sea-wolf bare then, when bottomward came she,
The ring-prince homeward, that he after was powerless
(He had daring to do it) to deal with his weapons,
But many a mere-beast tormented him swimming,
Flood-beasts no few with fierce-biting tusks did
Break through his burnie, the brave one pursued they.
The earl then discovered he was down in some cavern
Where no water whatever anyway harmed him,
And the clutch of the current could come not anear him,
Since the roofed-hall prevented; brightness a-gleaming
Fire-light he saw, flashing resplendent.
The good one saw then the sea-bottom's monster,
The mighty mere-woman; he made a great onset
With weapon-of-battle, his hand not desisted
From striking, that war-blade struck on her head then
A battle-song greedy. The stranger perceived then
The sword would not bite, her life would not injure,
But the falchion failed the folk-prince when straitened:
Erst had it often onsets encountered,
Oft cloven the helmet, the fated one's armor:
'Twas the first time that ever the excellent jewel
Had failed of its fame. Firm-mooded after,
Not heedless of valor, but mindful of glory,
Was Higelac's kinsman; the hero-chief angry
Cast then his carved-sword covered with jewels
That it lay on the earth, hard and steel-pointed;
He hoped in his strength, his hand-grapple sturdy.
So any must act whenever he thinketh
To gain him in battle glory unending,
And is reckless of living. The lord of the War-Geats
(He shrank not from battle) seized by the shoulder²

² Sw., R., and t.B. suggest 'feaxe' for 'eaxe' (1538) and render: Seized by the hair.

The mother of Grendel; then mighty in struggle
Swung he his enemy, since his anger was kindled,
That she fell to the floor. With furious grapple
She gave him requital³ early thereafter,
And stretched out to grab him; the strongest of warriors
Faint-mooded stumbled, till he fell in his traces,
Foot-going champion. Then she sat on the hall-guest
And wielded her war-knife wide-bladed, flashing,
For her son would take vengeance, her one only bairn.
His breast-armor woven bode on his shoulder;
It guarded his life, the entrance defended
'Gainst sword-point and edges. Ecgtheow's son there
Had fatally journeyed, champion of Geatmen,
In the arms of the ocean, had the armor not given,
Close-woven corslet, comfort and succor,
And had God most holy not awarded the victory,
All-knowing Lord; easily did heaven's
Ruler most righteous arrange it with justice;⁴
Uprose he erect ready for battle.

³ If 'hand-léan' be accepted (as the MS. has it), the line will read: She hand-reward gave him early thereafter.

⁴ Sw. and S. change H.-So.'s semicolon (v. 1557) to a comma, and translate: The Ruler of Heaven arranged it in justice easily, after he arose again.

XXIV. BEOWULF IS DOUBLE-CONQUEROR

Then he saw mid the war-gems a weapon of victory,
An ancient giant-sword, of edges a-doughty,
Glory of warriors: of weapons 'twas choicest,
Only 'twas larger than any man else was Able to bear to the battle-encounter,
The good and splendid work of the giants.
He grasped then the sword-hilt, knight of the Scyldings,
Bold and battle-grim, brandished his ring-sword,
Hopeless of living, hotly he smote her,
That the fiend-woman's neck firmly it grappled,
Broke through her bone-joints, the bill fully pierced her
Fate-cursèd body, she fell to the ground then:
The hand-sword was bloody, the hero exulted.
The brand was brilliant, brightly it glimmered,
Just as from heaven gemlike shineth
The torch of the firmament. He glanced 'long the building,
And turned by the wall then, Higelac's vassal
Raging and wrathful raised his battle-sword
Strong by the handle. The edge was not useless
To the hero-in-battle, but he speedily wished to Give Grendel requital for the many assaults he Had worked on the West-Danes not once, but often,
When he slew in slumber the subjects of Hrothgar,
Swallowed down fifteen sleeping retainers
Of the folk of the Danemen, and fully as many Carried away, a horrible prey.
He gave him requital, grim-raging champion,
When he saw on his rest-place weary of conflict
Grendel lying, of life-joys bereavèd,
As the battle at Heorot erstwhile had scathed him;
His body far bounded, a blow when he suffered,
Death having seized him, sword-smiting heavy,
And he cut off his head then. Early this noticed

The clever carles who as comrades of Hrothgar
 Gazed on the sea-deeps, that the surging wave-currents
 Were mightily mingled, the mere-flood was gory:
 Of the good one the gray-haired together held converse,
 The hoary of head, that they hoped not to see again
 The atheling ever, that exulting in victory
 He'd return there to visit the distinguished folk-ruler:
 Then many concluded the mere-wolf had killed him.¹
 The ninth hour came then. From the ness-edge departed
 The bold-mooded Scyldings; the gold-friend of heroes Homeward betook him. The strangers sat down then Soul-sick, sorrowful, the sea-waves regarding:
 They wished and yet weened not their well-loved friend-lord
 To see any more. The sword-blade began then,
 The blood having touched it, contracting and shriveling
 With battle-icicles; 'twas a wonderful marvel
 That it melted entirely, likest to ice when
 The Father unbindeth the bond of the frost and Unwindeth the wave-bands, He who wieldeth dominion
 Of times and of tides: a truth-firm Creator.
 Nor took he of jewels more in the dwelling,
 Lord of the Weders, though they lay all around him,
 Than the head and the handle handsome with jewels;

¹ 'þæs monige gewearð' (1599) and 'hafað þæs geworden' (2027).—In a paper published some years ago in one of the Johns Hopkins University circulars, I tried to throw upon these two long-doubtful passages some light derived from a study of like passages in Alfred's prose.—The impersonal verb 'geweorðan,' with an accus. of the person, and a þæt-clause is used several times with the meaning 'agree.' See Orosius (Sweet's ed.) 178₇; 204₃₄; 208₂₈; 210₁₅; 280₂₀. In the two Beowulf passages, the þæt-clause is anticipated by 'þæs,' which is clearly a gen. of the thing agreed on.

The first passage (v. 1599 (b)-1600) I translate literally: Then many agreed upon this (namely), that the sea-wolf had killed him.

The second passage (v. 2025 (b)-2027): She is promised ...; to this the friend of the Scyldings has agreed, etc. By emending 'is' instead of 'wæs' (2025), the tenses will be brought into perfect harmony.

In v. 1997 ff. this same idiom occurs, and was noticed in B.'s great article on Beowulf, which appeared about the time I published my reading of 1599 and 2027. Translate 1997 then: Wouldst let the South-Danes themselves decide about their struggle with Grendel. Here 'Súð-Dene' is accus. of person, and 'gúðe' is gen. of thing agreed on.

With such collateral support as that afforded by B. (P. and B. XII. 97), I have no hesitation in departing from H.-So., my usual guide.

The idiom above treated runs through A.-S., Old Saxon, and other Teutonic languages, and should be noticed in the lexicons.

The brand early melted, burnt was the weapon:²
 So hot was the blood, the strange-spirit poisonous
 That in it did perish. He early swam off then
 Who had bided in combat the carnage of haters,
 Went up through the ocean; the eddies were cleansèd,
 The spacious expanses, when the spirit from farland
 His life put aside and this short-lived existence.
 The seamen's defender came swimming to land then
 Doughty of spirit, rejoiced in his sea-gift,
 The bulky burden which he bore in his keeping.
 The excellent vassals advanced then to meet him,
 To God they were grateful, were glad in their chieftain,
 That to see him safe and sound was granted them.
 From the high-minded hero, then, helmet and burnie
 Were speedily loosened: the ocean was putrid,
 The water 'neath welkin weltered with gore.
 Forth did they fare, then, their footsteps retracing,
 Merry and mirthful, measured the earth-way,
 The highway familiar: men very daring³
 Bare then the head from the sea-cliff, burdening
 Each of the earlmen, excellent-valiant.
 Four of them had to carry with labor
 The head of Grendel to the high towering gold-hall
 Upstuck on the spear, till fourteen most-valiant
 And battle-brave Geatmen came there going
 Straight to the palace: the prince of the people
 Measured the mead-ways, their mood-brave companion.
 The atheling of earlmen entered the building,
 Deed-valiant man, adorned with distinction,
 Doughty shield-warrior, to address King Hrothgar:
 Then hung by the hair, the head of Grendel

² 'Bróden-mæl' is regarded by most scholars as meaning a damaskeened sword. Translate: The damaskeened sword burned up. Cf. 25 16 and note.

³ 'Cyning-balde' (1635) is the much-disputed reading of K. and Th. To render this, "nobly bold," "excellently bold," have been suggested. B. would read 'cyning-holde' (cf. 290), and render: Men well-disposed towards the king carried the head, etc. 'Cynebealde,' says t.B., endorsing Gr.

Was borne to the building, where beer-thanes were drinking,
Loth before earlmen and eke 'fore the lady:
The warriors beheld then a wonderful sight.

XXV. BEOWULF BRINGS HIS TROPHIES.— HROTHGAR'S GRATITUDE

Beowulf spake, offspring of Ecgtheow:

"Lo! we blithely have brought thee, bairn of Healfdene,
Prince of the Scyldings, these presents from ocean
Which thine eye looketh on, for an emblem of glory.
I came off alive from this, narrowly 'scaping:
In war 'neath the water the work with great pains I Performed, and the fight had been finished quite nearly,
Had God not defended me. I failed in the battle
Aught to accomplish, aided by Hrunting,
Though that weapon was worthy, but the Wielder of earth-folk
Gave me willingly to see on the wall a
Heavy old hand-sword hanging in splendor
(He guided most often the lorn and the friendless),
That I swung as a weapon. The wards of the house then
I killed in the conflict (when occasion was given me).
Then the battle-sword burned, the brand that was lifted,¹
As the blood-current sprang, hottest of war-sweats;
Seizing the hilt, from my foes I offbore it;
I avenged as I ought to their acts of malignity,
The murder of Danemen. I then make thee this promise,
Thou'lt be able in Heorot careless to slumber
With thy throng of heroes and the thanes of thy people
Every and each, of greater and lesser,
And thou needest not fear for them from the selfsame direction
As thou formerly fearedst, oh, folk-lord of Scyldings, End-day for earlmen." To the age-hoary man then,
The gray-haired chieftain, the gold-fashioned sword-hilt,
Old-work of giants, was thereupon given;
Since the fall of the fiends, it fell to the keeping
Of the wielder of Danemen, the wonder-smith's labor,

¹ Or rather, perhaps, 'the inlaid, or damaskeened weapon.' Cf. 24.57 and note.

And the bad-mooded being abandoned this world then,
Opponent of God, victim of murder,
And also his mother; it went to the keeping
Of the best of the world-kings, where waters encircle,
Who the scot divided in Scylding dominion.
Hrothgar discoursed, the hilt he regarded,
The ancient heirloom where an old-time contention's
Beginning was graven: the gurgling currents,
The flood slew thereafter the race of the giants,
They had proved themselves daring: that people was loth to
The Lord everlasting, through lash of the billows
The Father gave them final requital.
So in letters of rune on the clasp of the handle
Gleaming and golden, 'twas graven exactly,
Set forth and said, whom that sword had been made for,
Finest of irons, who first it was wrought for,
Wreathed at its handle and gleaming with serpents.
The wise one then said (silent they all were)
Son of old Healfdene: "He may say unrefuted
Who performs 'mid the folk-men fairness and truth
(The hoary old ruler remembers the past),
That better by birth is this bairn of the nobles!
Thy fame is extended through far-away countries,
Good friend Beowulf, o'er all of the races,
Thou holdest all firmly, hero-like strength with Prudence of spirit. I'll prove myself grateful
As before we agreed on; thou granted for long shalt
Become a great comfort to kinsmen and comrades,
A help unto heroes. Heremod became not
Such to the Scyldings, successors of Ecgwela;
He grew not to please them, but grievous destruction,
And diresome death-woes to Danemen attracted;
He slew in anger his table-companions,
Trustworthy counsellors, till he turned off lonely
From world-joys away, wide-famous ruler:

Though high-ruling heaven in hero-strength raised him,
In might exalted him, o'er men of all nations
Made him supreme, yet a murderous spirit
Grew in his bosom: he gave then no ring-gems
To the Danes after custom; endured he unjoyful
Standing the straits from strife that was raging, Longsome folk-sorrow. Learn then from this,
Lay hold of virtue! Though laden with winters,
I have sung thee these measures. 'Tis a marvel to tell it,
How all-ruling God from greatness of spirit
Giveth wisdom to children of men,
Manor and earlship: all things He ruleth.
He often permitteth the mood-thought of man of
The illustrious lineage to lean to possessions,
Allows him earthly delights at his manor,
A high-burg of heroes to hold in his keeping,
Maketh portions of earth-folk hear him,
And a wide-reaching kingdom so that, wisdom failing him,
He himself is unable to reckon its boundaries;
He liveth in luxury, little debars him,
Nor sickness nor age, no treachery-sorrow
Becloudeth his spirit, conflict nowhere,
No sword-hate, appeareth, but all of the world doth
Wend as he wisheth; the worse he knoweth not,
Till arrant arrogance inward pervading,
Waxeth and springeth, when the warder is sleeping,
The guard of the soul: with sorrows encompassed,
Too sound is his slumber, the slayer is near him,
Who with bow and arrow aimeth in malice.

XXVI. HROTHGAR MORALIZES.—REST AFTER LABOR

"Then bruised in his bosom he with bitter-toothed missile
 Is hurt 'neath his helmet: from harmful pollution
 He is powerless to shield him by the wonderful mandates
 Of the loath-cursèd spirit; what too long he hath holden
 Him seemeth too small, savage he hoardeth,
 Nor boastfully giveth gold-plated rings,¹
 The fate of the future flouts and forgetteth
 Since God had erst given him greatness no little,
 Wielder of Glory. His end-day anear,
 It afterward happens that the bodily-dwelling
 Fleetingly fadeth, falls into ruins;
 Another lays hold who doleth the ornaments,
 The nobleman's jewels, nothing lamenting,
 Heedeth no terror. Oh, Beowulf dear,
 Best of the heroes, from bale-strife defend thee,
 And choose thee the better, counsels eternal;
 Beware of arrogance, world-famous champion!
 But a little-while lasts thy life-vigor's fulness;
 'Twill after hap early, that illness or sword-edge
 Shall part thee from strength, or the grasp of the fire,
 Or the wave of the current, or clutch of the edges,
 Or flight of the war-spear, or age with its horrors,
 Or thine eyes' bright flashing shall fade into darkness:
 'Twill happen full early, excellent hero,
 That death shall subdue thee. So the Danes a half-century
 I held under heaven, helped them in struggles
 'Gainst many a race in middle-earth's regions,
 With ash-wood and edges, that enemies none
 On earth molested me. Lo! offsetting change, now,
 Came to my manor, grief after joyance,

¹ K. says 'proudly giveth.'—Gr. says, 'And gives no gold-plated rings, in order to incite the recipient to boastfulness.'—B. suggests 'gyld' for 'gylp,' and renders: And gives no beaten rings for reward.

When Grendel became my constant visitor,
 Inveterate hater: I from that malice
 Continually travailed with trouble no little.
 Thanks be to God that I gained in my lifetime,
 To the Lord everlasting, to look on the gory
 Head with mine eyes, after long-lasting sorrow!
 Go to the bench now, battle-adornèd
 Joy in the feasting: of jewels in common
 We'll meet with many when morning appeareth."
 The Geatman was gladsome, ganged he immediately
 To go to the bench, as the clever one bade him.
 Then again as before were the famous-for-prowess,
 Hall-inhabiters, handsomely banqueted,
 Feasted anew. The night-veil fell then
 Dark o'er the warriors. The courtiers rose then;
 The gray-haired was anxious to go to his slumbers,
 The hoary old Scylding. Hankered the Geatman,
 The champion doughty, greatly, to rest him:
 An earlman early outward did lead him,
 Fagged from his faring, from far-country springing,
 Who for etiquette's sake all of a liegeman's
 Needs regarded, such as seamen at that time
 Were bounden to feel. The big-hearted rested;
 The building uptowered, spacious and gilded,
 The guest within slumbered, till the sable-clad raven
 Blithely foreboded the beacon of heaven.
 Then the bright-shining sun o'er the bottoms came going;²
 The warriors hastened, the heads of the peoples
 Were ready to go again to their peoples,
 The high-mooded farer would faraway thenceward
 Look for his vessel. The valiant one bade then,³

² If S.'s emendation be accepted, v. 57 will read: Then came the light, going bright after darkness: the warriors, etc.

³ As the passage stands in H.-So., Unferth presents Beowulf with the sword Hrunting, and B. thanks him for the gift. If, however, the suggestions of Grdtvg. and M. be accepted, the passage will read: Then the brave one

Offspring of Ecglaf, off to bear Hrunting,
To take his weapon, his well-beloved iron;
He him thanked for the gift, saying good he accounted
The war-friend and mighty, nor chid he with words then
The blade of the brand: 'twas a brave-mooded hero.
When the warriors were ready, arrayed in their trappings,
The atheling dear to the Danemen advanced then
On to the dais, where the other was sitting,
Grim-mooded hero, greeted King Hrothgar.

(i.e. Beowulf) commanded that Hrunting be borne to the son of Ecglaf (Unferth), bade him take his sword, his dear weapon; he (B.) thanked him (U.) for the loan, etc.

XXVII. SORROW AT PARTING

Beowulf spake, Ecgtheow's offspring:

"We men of the water wish to declare now
Fared from far-lands, we're firmly determined
To seek King Higelac. Here have we fitly
Been welcomed and feasted, as heart would desire it;
Good was the greeting. If greater affection
I am anywise able ever on earth to Gain at thy hands, ruler of heroes,
Than yet I have done, I shall quickly be ready
For combat and conflict. O'er the course of the waters
Learn I that neighbors alarm thee with terror,
As haters did whilom, I hither will bring thee
For help unto heroes henchmen by thousands.
I know as to Higelac, the lord of the Geatmen,
Though young in years, he yet will permit me,
By words and by works, ward of the people,
Fully to furnish thee forces and bear thee
My lance to relieve thee, if liegemen shall fail thee,
And help of my hand-strength; if Hrethric be treating,
Bairn of the king, at the court of the Geatmen,
He thereat may find him friends in abundance:
Faraway countries he were better to seek for Who trusts in himself." Hrothgar discoursed then, Making rejoinder: "These words thou hast uttered
All-knowing God hath given thy spirit!
Ne'er heard I an earlman thus early in life
More clever in speaking: thou'rt cautious of spirit,
Mighty of muscle, in mouth-answers prudent.
I count on the hope that, happen it ever
That missile shall rob thee of Hrethel's descendant,
Edge-horrid battle, and illness or weapon
Deprive thee of prince, of people's protector,
And life thou yet holdest, the Sea-Geats will never

Find a more fitting folk-lord to choose them,
 Gem-ward of heroes, than thou mightest prove thee,
 If the kingdom of kinsmen thou carest to govern.
 Thy mood-spirit likes me the longer the better,
 Beowulf dear: thou hast brought it to pass that
 To both these peoples peace shall be common,
 To Geat-folk and Danemen, the strife be suspended,
 The secret assailings they suffered in yore-days;
 And also that jewels be shared while I govern
 The wide-stretching kingdom, and that many shall visit
 Others o'er the ocean with excellent gift-gems:
 The ring-adorned bark shall bring o'er the currents
 Presents and love-gifts. This people I know
 Tow'rd foeman and friend firmly established,¹ After ancient etiquette everywise blameless."
 Then the warden of earlmen gave him still farther,
 Kinsman of Healfdene, a dozen of jewels,
 Bade him safely seek with the presents
 His well-beloved people, early returning.
 Then the noble-born king kissed the distinguished,
 Dear-lovèd liegeman, the Dane-prince saluted him,
 And claspèd his neck; tears from him fell,
 From the gray-headed man: he two things expected,
 Agèd and reverend, but rather the second,
²That bold in council they'd meet thereafter.
 The man was so dear that he failed to suppress the Emotions that moved him, but in mood-fetters fastened
 The long-famous hero longeth in secret
 Deep in his spirit for the dear-beloved man
 Though not a blood-kinsman. Beowulf thenceward,
 Gold-splendid warrior, walked o'er the meadows

¹ For 'geworhte,' the crux of this passage, B. proposes 'gebóhte,' rendering: I know this people with firm thought every way blameless towards foe and friends.

² S. and B. emend so as to negative the verb 'meet.' "Why should Hrothgar weep if he expects to meet Beowulf again?" both these scholars ask. But the weeping is mentioned before the 'expectations': the tears may have been due to many emotions, especially gratitude, struggling for expression.

Exulting in treasure: the sea-going vessel
Riding at anchor awaited its owner.
As they pressed on their way then, the present of Hrothgar
Was frequently referred to: a folk-king indeed that Everyway blameless, till age did debar him
The joys of his might, which hath many oft injured.

XXVIII. THE HOMEWARD JOURNEY.—THE TWO QUEENS

Then the band of very valiant retainers
 Came to the current; they were clad all in armor,
 In link-woven burnies. The land-warder noticed
 The return of the earlmen, as he erstwhile had seen them;
 Nowise with insult he greeted the strangers
 From the naze of the cliff, but rode on to meet them;
 Said the bright-armored visitors¹ vesselward traveled Welcome to Weders. The wide-bosomed craft then Lay on the sand, laden with armor,
 With horses and jewels, the ring-stemmèd sailer:
 The mast uptowered o'er the treasure of Hrothgar.
 To the boat-ward a gold-bound brand he presented,
 That he was afterwards honored on the ale-bench more highly
 As the heirloom's owner. ² Set he out on his vessel,
 To drive on the deep, Dane-country left he.
 Along by the mast then a sea-garment fluttered,
 A rope-fastened sail. The sea-boat resounded,
 The wind o'er the waters the wave-floater nowise
 Kept from its journey; the sea-goer traveled,
 The foamy-necked floated forth o'er the currents,
 The well-fashioned vessel o'er the ways of the ocean,
 Till they came within sight of the cliffs of the Geatmen,
 The well-known headlands. The wave-goer hastened
 Driven by breezes, stood on the shore.
 Prompt at the ocean, the port-ward was ready,
 Who long in the past outlooked in the distance,³

² R. suggests, 'Gewát him on naca,' and renders: The vessel set out, to drive on the sea, the Dane-country left. 'On' bears the alliteration; cf. 'on hafu' (2524). This has some advantages over the H.-So. reading; viz. (1) It adds nothing to the text; (2) it makes 'naca' the subject, and thus brings the passage into keeping with the context, where the poet has exhausted his vocabulary in detailing the actions of the vessel.—B.'s emendation (cf. P. and B. XII. 97) is violent.

At water's-edge waiting well-lovèd heroes;
 He bound to the bank then the broad-bosomed vessel
 Fast in its fetters, lest the force of the waters
 Should be able to injure the ocean-wood winsome.
 Bade he up then take the treasure of princes,
 Plate-gold and fretwork; not far was it thence
 To go off in search of the giver of jewels:
 Hrethel's son Higelac at home there remaineth,⁴
 Himself with his comrades close to the sea-coast.
 The building was splendid, the king heroic,
 Great in his hall, Hygd very young was,
 Fine-mooded, clever, though few were the winters
 That the daughter of Hæreth had dwelt in the borough;
 But she nowise was cringing nor niggard of presents,
 Of ornaments rare, to the race of the Geatmen.
 Thrytho nursed anger, excellent⁵ folk-queen,
 Hot-burning hatred: no hero whatever
 'Mong household companions, her husband excepted
 Dared to adventure to look at the woman
 With eyes in the daytime;⁶ but he knew that death-chains
 Hand-wreathed were wrought him: early thereafter,
 When the hand-strife was over, edges were ready,
 That fierce-raging sword-point had to force a decision,
 Murder-bale show. Such no womanly custom
 For a lady to practise, though lovely her person,
 That a weaver-of-peace, on pretence of anger
 A belovèd liegeman of life should deprive.
 Soothly this hindered Heming's kinsman;
 Other ale-drinking earlmen asserted
 That fearful folk-sorrows fewer she wrought them,

³ B. translates: Who for a long time, ready at the coast, had looked out into the distance eagerly for the dear men. This changes the syntax of 'léofra manna.'

⁴ For 'wunað' (v. 1924) several eminent critics suggest 'wunade' (=remained). This makes the passage much clearer.

⁵ Why should such a woman be described as an 'excellent' queen? C. suggests 'frécnu' = dangerous, bold.

⁶ For 'an dæges' various readings have been offered. If 'and-éges' be accepted, the sentence will read: No hero ... dared look upon her, eye to eye. If 'án-dæges' be adopted, translate: Dared look upon her the whole day.

Treacherous doings, since first she was given Adorned with gold to the war-hero youthful,
For her origin honored, when Offa's great palace
O'er the fallow flood by her father's instructions
She sought on her journey, where she afterwards fully,
Famed for her virtue, her fate on the king's-seat
Enjoyed in her lifetime, love did she hold with
The ruler of heroes, the best, it is told me,
Of all of the earthmen that oceans encompass,
Of earl-kindreds endless; hence Offa was famous
Far and widely, by gifts and by battles,
Spear-valiant hero; the home of his fathers
He governed with wisdom, whence Eomær did issue
For help unto heroes, Heming's kinsman,
Grandson of Garmund, great in encounters.

XXIX. BEOWULF AND HIGELAC

Then the brave one departed, his band along with him,
 Seeking the sea-shore, the sea-marches treading,
 The wide-stretching shores. The world-candle glimmered,
 The sun from the southward; they proceeded then onward,
 Early arriving where they heard that the troop-lord, Ongentheow's slayer, excellent, youthful
 Folk-prince and warrior was distributing jewels,
 Close in his castle. The coming of Beowulf
 Was announced in a message quickly to Higelac,
 That the folk-troop's defender forth to the palace
 The linden-companion alive was advancing,
 Secure from the combat courtward a-going.
 The building was early inward made ready
 For the foot-going guests as the good one had ordered.
 He sat by the man then who had lived through the struggle,
 Kinsman by kinsman, when the king of the people
 Had in lordly language saluted the dear one,
 In words that were formal. The daughter of Hæreth
 Coursed through the building, carrying mead-cups:¹
 She loved the retainers, tendered the beakers
 To the high-minded Geatmen. Higelac 'gan then Pleasantly plying his companion with questions
 In the high-towering palace. A curious interest Tormented his spirit, what meaning to see in The Sea-Geats' adventures: "Beowulf worthy,
 How throve your journeying, when thou thoughtest suddenly
 Far o'er the salt-streams to seek an encounter,
 A battle at Heorot? Hast bettered for Hrothgar,
 The famous folk-leader, his far-published sorrows
 Any at all? In agony-billows
 I mused upon torture, distrusted the journey

¹ 'Meodu-scencum' (1981) some would render 'with mead-pourers.' Translate then: The daughter of Hæreth went through the building accompanied by mead-pourers.

Of the belovèd liegeman; I long time did pray thee
 By no means to seek out the murderous spirit,
 To suffer the South-Danes themselves to decide on²
 Grappling with Grendel. To God I am thankful
 To be suffered to see thee safe from thy journey.”
 Beowulf answered, bairn of old Ecgtheow:
 “’Tis hidden by no means, Higelac chieftain,
 From many of men, the meeting so famous,
 What mournful moments of me and of Grendel
 Were passed in the place where he pressing affliction
 On the Victory-Scyldings scathefully brought,
 Anguish forever; that all I avengèd,
 So that any under heaven of the kinsmen of Grendel
 Needeth not boast of that cry-in-the-morning,
 Who longest liveth of the loth-going kindred,³ Encompassed by moorland. I came in my journey
 To the royal ring-hall, Hrothgar to greet there:
 Soon did the famous scion of Healfdene,
 When he understood fully the spirit that led me,
 Assign me a seat with the son of his bosom.
 The troop was in joyance; mead-glee greater
 ’Neath arch of the ether not ever beheld I
 ’Mid hall-building holders. The highly-famed queen,
 Peace-tie of peoples, oft passed through the building,
 Cheered the young troopers; she oft tendered a hero
 A beautiful ring-band, ere she went to her sitting.
 Oft the daughter of Hrothgar in view of the courtiers
 To the earls at the end the ale-vessel carried,
 Whom Freaware I heard then hall-sitters title,
 When nail-adorned jewels she gave to the heroes:
 Gold-bedecked, youthful, to the glad son of Froda
 Her faith has been plighted; the friend of the Scyldings,

² See my note to 1599, supra, and B. in P. and B. XII. 97.

³ For ‘fenne,’ supplied by Grdtvg., B. suggests ‘fácne’ (cf. Jul. 350). Accepting this, translate: Who longest lives of the hated race, steeped in treachery.

The guard of the kingdom, hath given his sanction,⁴
 And counts it a vantage, for a part of the quarrels,
 A portion of hatred, to pay with the woman.

⁵Somewhere not rarely, when the ruler has fallen,
 The life-taking lance relaxeth its fury
 For a brief breathing-spell, though the bride be charming!

⁴ See note to v. 1599 above.

⁵ This is perhaps the least understood sentence in the poem, almost every word being open to dispute. (1) The 'nó' of our text is an emendation, and is rejected by many scholars. (2) 'Seldan' is by some taken as an adv. (= seldom), and by others as a noun (= page, companion). (3) 'Léod-hryre,' some render 'fall of the people'; others, 'fall of the prince.' (4) 'Búgeð,' most scholars regard as the intrans. verb meaning 'bend,' 'rest'; but one great scholar has translated it 'shall kill.' (5) 'Hwær,' Very recently, has been attacked, 'wære' being suggested. (6) As a corollary to the above, the same critic proposes to drop 'oft' out of the text.—t.B. suggests: Oft seldan wære after léodhryre: lýtle hwíle bongár búgeð, þeah séo brýd dūge = often has a treaty been (thus) struck, after a prince had fallen: (but only) a short time is the spear (then) wont to rest, however excellent the bride may be.

XXX. BEOWULF NARRATES HIS ADVENTURES TO HIGELAC

"It well may discomfit the prince of the Heathobards
 And each of the thanemen of earls that attend him,
 When he goes to the building escorting the woman,
 That a noble-born Daneman the knights should be feasting:
 There gleam on his person the leavings of elders
 Hard and ring-bright, Heathobards' treasure,
 While they wielded their arms, till they misled to the battle
 Their own dear lives and beloved companions.
 He saith at the banquet who the collar beholdeth,
 An ancient ash-warrior who earlmen's destruction
 Clearly recalleth (cruel his spirit),
 Sadly beginneth sounding the youthful
 Thane-champion's spirit through the thoughts of his bosom,
 War-grief to waken, and this word-answer speaketh:
 'Art thou able, my friend, to know when thou seest it
 The brand which thy father bare to the conflict
 In his latest adventure, 'neath visor of helmet,
 The dearly-loved iron, where Danemen did slay him,
 And brave-mooded Scyldings, on the fall of the heroes,
 (When vengeance was sleeping) the slaughter-place wielded?
 E'en now some man of the murderer's progeny
 Exulting in ornaments enters the building,
 Boasts of his blood-shedding, offbeareth the jewel
 Which thou shouldst wholly hold in possession!
 So he urgeth and mindeth on every occasion
 With woe-bringing words, till waxeth the season
 When the woman's thane for the works of his father,
 The bill having bitten, blood-gory sleepeth,
 Fated to perish; the other one thenceward
 'Scapeth alive, the land knoweth thoroughly.¹

¹ For 'lifigende' (2063), a mere conjecture, 'wigende' has been suggested. The line would then read: Escapeth by fighting, knows the land thoroughly.

Then the oaths of the earlmen on each side are broken,
When rancors unresting are raging in Ingeld
And his wife-love waxeth less warm after sorrow.
So the Heathobards' favor not faithful I reckon,
Their part in the treaty not true to the Danemen,
Their friendship not fast. I further shall tell thee
More about Grendel, that thou fully mayst hear, Ornament-giver, what afterward came from
The hand-rush of heroes. When heaven's bright jewel
O'er earthfields had glided, the stranger came raging,
The horrible night-fiend, us for to visit,
Where wholly unharmed the hall we were guarding.
To Hondscio happened a hopeless contention,
Death to the doomed one, dead he fell foremost,
Girded war-champion; to him Grendel became then,
To the vassal distinguished, a tooth-weaponed murderer,
The well-beloved henchman's body all swallowed.
Not the earlier off empty of hand did
The bloody-toothed murderer, mindful of evils,
Wish to escape from the gold-giver's palace,
But sturdy of strength he strove to outdo me,
Hand-ready grappled. A glove was suspended
Spacious and wondrous, in art-fetters fastened,
Which was fashioned entirely by touch of the craftman
From the dragon's skin by the devil's devices:
He down in its depths would do me unsadly
One among many, deed-doer raging,
Though sinless he saw me; not so could it happen
When I in my anger upright did stand.
'Tis too long to recount how requital I furnished
For every evil to the earlmen's destroyer;
'Twas there, my prince, that I proudly distinguished Thy land with my labors. He left and retreated,
He lived his life a little while longer:
Yet his right-hand guarded his footstep in Heorot,

And sad-mooded thence to the sea-bottom fell he,
 Mournful in mind. For the might-rush of battle
 The friend of the Scyldings, with gold that was plated,
 With ornaments many, much requited me,
 When daylight had dawned, and down to the banquet
 We had sat us together. There was chanting and joyance:
 The age-stricken Scylding asked many questions
 And of old-times related; oft light-ringing harp-strings,
 Joy-telling wood, were touched by the brave one;
 Now he uttered measures, mourning and truthful,
 Then the large-hearted land-king a legend of wonder
 Truthfully told us. Now troubled with years
 The age-hoary warrior afterward began to Mourn for the might that marked him in youth-days;
 His breast within boiled, when burdened with winters
 Much he remembered. From morning till night then
 We joyed us therein as etiquette suffered,
 Till the second night season came unto earth-folk.
 Then early thereafter, the mother of Grendel
 Was ready for vengeance, wretched she journeyed;
 Her son had death ravished, the wrath of the Geatmen.
 The horrible woman avenged her offspring,
 And with mighty mainstrength murdered a hero.
 There the spirit of Æschere, aged adviser,
 Was ready to vanish; nor when morn had lightened
 Were they anywise suffered to consume him with fire,
 Folk of the Danemen, the death-weakened hero,
 Nor the beloved liegeman to lay on the pyre;
 She the corpse had offcarried in the clutch of the foeman²
 'Neath mountain-brook's flood. To Hrothgar 'twas saddest
 Of pains that ever had preyed on the chieftain;
 By the life of thee the land-prince then me³

² For 'fæðmum,' Gr.'s conjecture, B. proposes 'færunga.' These three half-verses would then read: She bore off the corpse of her foe suddenly under the mountain-torrent.

Besought very sadly, in sea-currents' eddies
To display my prowess, to peril my safety,
Might-deeds accomplish; much did he promise.
I found then the famous flood-current's cruel,
Horrible depth-warder. A while unto us two Hand was in common; the currents were seething
With gore that was clotted, and Grendel's fierce mother's Head I offhacked in the hall at the bottom
With huge-reaching sword-edge, hardly I wrested
My life from her clutches; not doomed was I then,
But the warden of earlmen afterward gave me
Jewels in quantity, kinsman of Healfdene.

³ The phrase 'þíne lýfe' (2132) was long rendered 'with thy (presupposed) permission.' The verse would read: The land-prince then sadly besought me, with thy (presupposed) permission, etc.

XXXI. GIFT-GIVING IS MUTUAL

“So the beloved land-prince lived in decorum;
 I had missed no rewards, no meeds of my prowess,
 But he gave me jewels, regarding my wishes,
 Healfdene his bairn; I’ll bring them to thee, then,
 Atheling of earlmen, offer them gladly.
 And still unto thee is all my affection:¹
 But few of my folk-kin find I surviving
 But thee, dear Higelac!” Bade he in then to carry²
 The boar-image, banner, battle-high helmet,
 Iron-gray armor, the excellent weapon,
 In song-measures said: “This suit-for-the-battle
 Hrothgar presented me, bade me expressly,
 Wise-mooded atheling, thereafter to tell thee³
 The whole of its history, said King Heregar owned it,
 Dane-prince for long: yet he wished not to give then
 The mail to his son, though dearly he loved him, Hereward the hardy. Hold all in joyance!”
 I heard that there followed hard on the jewels
 Two braces of stallions of striking resemblance,
 Dappled and yellow; he granted him usance
 Of horses and treasures. So a kinsman should bear him,
 No web of treachery weave for another,
 Nor by cunning craftiness cause the destruction
 Of trusty companion. Most precious to Higelac,
 The bold one in battle, was the bairn of his sister,
 And each unto other mindful of favors.
 I am told that to Hygd he proffered the necklace,

¹ This verse B. renders, ‘Now serve I again thee alone as my gracious king.’

² For ‘eafor’ (2153), Kl. suggests ‘ealdor.’ Translate then: Bade the prince then to bear in the banner, battle-high helmet, etc. On the other hand, W. takes ‘eaforhéafodsegn’ as a compound, meaning ‘helmet’: He bade them bear in the helmet, battle-high helm, gray armor, etc.

³ The H.-So. rendering (ærest = history, origin; ‘eft’ for ‘est’), though liable to objection, is perhaps the best offered. ‘That I should very early tell thee of his favor, kindness’ sounds well; but ‘his’ is badly placed to limit ‘ést.’—Perhaps, ‘eft’ with verbs of saying may have the force of Lat. prefix ‘re,’ and the H.-So. reading mean, ‘that I should its origin rehearse to thee.’

Wonder-gem rare that Wealhtheow gave him,
The troop-leader's daughter, a trio of horses
Slender and saddle-bright; soon did the jewel
Embellish her bosom, when the beer-feast was over.
So Ecgtheow's bairn brave did prove him,
War-famous man, by deeds that were valiant,
He lived in honor, beloved companions
Slew not carousing; his mood was not cruel,
But by hand-strength hugest of heroes then living
The brave one retained the bountiful gift that
The Lord had allowed him. Long was he wretched,
So that sons of the Geatmen accounted him worthless,
And the lord of the liegemen loth was to do him
Mickle of honor, when mead-cups were passing;
They fully believed him idle and sluggish,
An indolent atheling: to the honor-blest man there
Came requital for the cuts he had suffered.
The folk-troop's defender bade fetch to the building
The heirloom of Hrethel, embellished with gold,
So the brave one enjoined it; there was jewel no richer
In the form of a weapon 'mong Geats of that era;
In Beowulf's keeping he placed it and gave him
Seven of thousands, manor and lordship.
Common to both was land 'mong the people,
Estate and inherited rights and possessions,
To the second one specially spacious dominions,
To the one who was better. It afterward happened
In days that followed, befell the battle-thanes,
After Higelac's death, and when Heardred was murdered
With weapons of warfare 'neath well-covered targets,
When valiant battlemen in victor-band sought him,
War-Scylfing heroes harassed the nephew
Of Hereric in battle. To Beowulf's keeping Turned there in time extensive dominions:
He fittingly ruled them a fifty of winters

(He a man-ruler wise was, manor-ward old) till
A certain one 'gan, on gloom-darkening nights, a
Dragon, to govern, who guarded a treasure,
A high-rising stone-cliff, on heath that was grayish:
A path 'neath it lay, unknown unto mortals.
Some one of earthmen entered the mountain,
The heathenish hoard laid hold of with ardor;

XXXII. THE HOARD AND THE DRAGON

* * * * *

He sought of himself who sorely did harm him,
But, for need very pressing, the servant of one of The sons of the heroes hate-blows evaded,
Seeking for shelter and the sin-driven warrior
Took refuge within there. He early looked in it,

* * * * *

* * * * *

* * * * * when the onset surprised him,
He a gem-vessel saw there: many of suchlike
Ancient ornaments in the earth-cave were lying,
As in days of yore some one of men of Illustrious lineage, as a legacy monstrous,
There had secreted them, careful and thoughtful,
Dear-valued jewels. Death had offsnatched them,
In the days of the past, and the one man moreover
Of the flower of the folk who fared there the longest,
Was fain to defer it, friend-mourning warder,
A little longer to be left in enjoyment
Of long-lasting treasure.¹ A barrow all-ready
Stood on the plain the stream-currents nigh to,
New by the ness-edge, unnethe of approaching:
The keeper of rings carried within a
²Ponderous deal of the treasure of nobles,
Of gold that was beaten, briefly he spake then:³
“Hold thou, O Earth, now heroes no more may,
The earnings of earlmen. Lo! erst in thy bosom
Worthy men won them; war-death hath ravished,
Perilous life-bale, all my warriors,

² For ‘hard-fyrdne’ (2246), B. first suggested ‘hard-fyndne,’ rendering: A heap of treasures ... so great that its equal would be hard to find. The same scholar suggests later ‘hord-wynne dæl’ = A deal of treasure-joy.

³ Some read ‘fec-word’ (2247), and render: Banning words uttered.

Liegemen belovèd, who this life have forsaken,
Who hall-pleasures saw. No sword-bearer have I,
And no one to burnish the gold-plated vessel,
The high-valued beaker: my heroes are vanished.
The hardy helmet behung with gilding
Shall be reaved of its riches: the ring-cleansers slumber
Who were charged to have ready visors-for-battle,
And the burnie that bided in battle-encounter
O'er breaking of war-shields the bite of the edges
Moulds with the hero. The ring-twisted armor,
Its lord being lifeless, no longer may journey
Hanging by heroes; harp-joy is vanished,
The rapture of glee-wood, no excellent falcon
Swoops through the building, no swift-footed charger
Grindeth the gravel. A grievous destruction
No few of the world-folk widely hath scattered!"
So, woful of spirit one after all
Lamented mournfully, moaning in sadness
By day and by night, till death with its billows
Dashed on his spirit. Then the ancient dusk-scather
Found the great treasure standing all open,
He who flaming and fiery flies to the barrows,
Naked war-dragon, nightly escapeth
Encompassed with fire; men under heaven
Widely beheld him. 'Tis said that he looks for⁴
The hoard in the earth, where old he is guarding
The heathenish treasure; he'll be nowise the better.
So three-hundred winters the waster of peoples
Held upon earth that excellent hoard-hall,
Till the forementioned earlman angered him bitterly:
The beat-plated beaker he bare to his chieftain
And fullest remission for all his remissness
Begged of his liegelord. Then the hoard⁵ was discovered,

⁴ An earlier reading of H.'s gave the following meaning to this passage: He is said to inhabit a mound under the earth, where he, etc. The translation in the text is more authentic.

The treasure was taken, his petition was granted
 The lorn-mooded liegeman. His lord regarded
 The old-work of earth-folk—'twas the earliest occasion.
 When the dragon awoke, the strife was renewed there;
 He snuffed 'long the stone then, stout-hearted found he
 The footprint of foeman; too far had he gone
 With cunning craftiness close to the head of The fire-spewing dragon. So undoomed he may 'scape from Anguish and exile with ease who possesseth
 The favor of Heaven. The hoard-warden eagerly Searched o'er the ground then, would meet with the person
 That caused him sorrow while in slumber reclining:
 Gleaming and wild he oft went round the cavern,
 All of it outward; not any of earthmen
 Was seen in that desert.⁶ Yet he joyed in the battle,
 Rejoiced in the conflict: oft he turned to the barrow,
 Sought for the gem-cup;⁷ this he soon perceived then
 That some man or other had discovered the gold,
 The famous folk-treasure. Not fain did the hoard-ward
 Wait until evening; then the ward of the barrow
 Was angry in spirit, the loathèd one wished to Pay for the dear-valued drink-cup with fire.
 Then the day was done as the dragon would have it,
 He no longer would wait on the wall, but departed Fire-impelled, flaming. Fearful the start was
 To earls in the land, as it early thereafter
 To their giver-of-gold was grievously ended.

⁵ The repetition of 'hord' in this passage has led some scholars to suggest new readings to avoid the second 'hord.' This, however, is not under the main stress, and, it seems to me, might easily be accepted.

⁶ The reading of H.-So. is well defended in the notes to that volume. B. emends and renders: Nor was there any man in that desert who rejoiced in conflict, in battle-work. That is, the hoard-ward could not find any one who had disturbed his slumbers, for no warrior was there, t.B.'s emendation would give substantially the same translation.

⁷ 'Sinc-fæt' (2301): this word both here and in v. 2232, t.B. renders 'treasure.'

XXXIII. BRAVE THOUGH AGED. REMINISCENCES

The stranger began then to vomit forth fire,
To burn the great manor; the blaze then glimmered
For anguish to earlmen, not anything living
Was the hateful air-goer willing to leave there.
The war of the worm widely was noticed,
The feud of the foeman afar and anear,
How the enemy injured the earls of the Geatmen,
Harried with hatred: back he hied to the treasure,
To the well-hidden cavern ere the coming of daylight.
He had circled with fire the folk of those regions,
With brand and burning; in the barrow he trusted,
In the wall and his war-might: the weening deceived him.
Then straight was the horror to Beowulf published,
Early forsooth, that his own native homestead,¹
The best of buildings, was burning and melting,
Gift-seat of Geatmen. 'Twas a grief to the spirit
Of the good-mooded hero, the greatest of sorrows:
The wise one weened then that wielding his kingdom
'Gainst the ancient commandments, he had bitterly angered
The Lord everlasting: with lorn meditations
His bosom welled inward, as was nowise his custom.
The fire-spewing dragon fully had wasted
The fastness of warriors, the water-land outward,
The manor with fire. The folk-ruling hero,
Prince of the Weders, was planning to wreak him.
The warmen's defender bade them to make him,
Earlmen's atheling, an excellent war-shield
Wholly of iron: fully he knew then
That wood from the forest was helpless to aid him,
Shield against fire. The long-worthy ruler
Must live the last of his limited earth-days,
Of life in the world and the worm along with him,

¹ 'Hám' (2326), the suggestion of B. is accepted by t.B. and other scholars.

Though he long had been holding hoard-wealth in plenty.
 Then the ring-prince disdained to seek with a war-band,
 With army extensive, the air-going ranger;
 He felt no fear of the foeman's assaults and
 He counted for little the might of the dragon,
 His power and prowess: for previously dared he
 A heap of hostility, hazarded dangers,
 War-thane, when Hrothgar's palace he cleansèd,
 Conquering combatant, clutched in the battle
 The kinsmen of Grendel, of kindred detested.²
 'Twas of hand-fights not least where Higelac was slaughtered,
 When the king of the Geatmen with clashings of battle,
 Friend-lord of folks in Frisian dominions,
 Offspring of Hrethrel perished through sword-drink,
 With battle-swords beaten; thence Beowulf came then
 On self-help relying, swam through the waters;
 He bare on his arm, lone-going, thirty
 Outfits of armor, when the ocean he mounted.
 The Hetwars by no means had need to be boastful
 Of their fighting afoot, who forward to meet him Carried their war-shields: not many returned from
 The brave-mooded battle-knight back to their homesteads.
 Ecgtheow's bairn o'er the bight-courses swam then,
 Lone-goer lorn to his land-folk returning,
 Where Hygd to him tendered treasure and kingdom,
 Rings and dominion: her son she not trusted,
 To be able to keep the kingdom devised him
 'Gainst alien races, on the death of King Higelac.
 Yet the sad ones succeeded not in persuading the atheling
 In any way ever, to act as a suzerain
 To Heardred, or promise to govern the kingdom;
 Yet with friendly counsel in the folk he sustained him,
 Gracious, with honor, till he grew to be older,

² For 'láðan cynnes' (2355), t.B. suggests 'láðan cynne,' apposition to 'mægum.' From syntactical and other considerations, this is a most excellent emendation.

Wielded the Weders. Wide-fleeing outlaws,
Ohthere's sons, sought him o'er the waters:
They had stirred a revolt 'gainst the helm of the Scylfings,
The best of the sea-kings, who in Swedish dominions
Distributed treasure, distinguished folk-leader.
'Twas the end of his earth-days; injury fatal³
By swing of the sword he received as a greeting,
Offspring of Higelac; Ongentheow's bairn
Later departed to visit his homestead,
When Heardred was dead; let Beowulf rule them,
Govern the Geatmen: good was that folk-king.

³ Gr. read 'on feorme' (2386), rendering: He there at the banquet a fatal wound received by blows of the sword.

XXXIV. BEOWULF SEEKS THE DRAGON.— BEOWULF'S REMINISCENCES

He planned requital for the folk-leader's ruin
In days thereafter, to Eadgils the wretched Becoming an enemy. Ohthere's son then Went with a war-troop o'er the wide-stretching currents
With warriors and weapons: with woe-journeys cold he After avenged him, the king's life he took.
So he came off uninjured from all of his battles,
Perilous fights, offspring of Ecgtheow,
From his deeds of daring, till that day most momentous
When he fate-driven fared to fight with the dragon.
With eleven companions the prince of the Geatmen
Went lowering with fury to look at the fire-drake:
Inquiring he'd found how the feud had arisen,
Hate to his heroes; the highly-famed gem-vessel
Was brought to his keeping through the hand of th' informer.
That in the throng was thirteenth of heroes,
That caused the beginning of conflict so bitter,
Captive and wretched, must sad-mooded thenceward
Point out the place: he passed then unwillingly
To the spot where he knew of the notable cavern,
The cave under earth, not far from the ocean,
The anger of eddies, which inward was full of Jewels and wires: a warden uncanny,
Warrior weaponed, wardered the treasure,
Old under earth; no easy possession
For any of earth-folk access to get to.
Then the battle-brave atheling sat on the naze-edge,
While the gold-friend of Geatmen gracious saluted
His fireside-companions: woe was his spirit,
Death-boding, wav'ring; Weird very near him,
Who must seize the old hero, his soul-treasure look for,
Dragging aloof his life from his body:

Not flesh-hidden long was the folk-leader's spirit.
 Beowulf spake, Ecgtheow's son:
 "I survived in my youth-days many a conflict,
 Hours of onset: that all I remember.
 I was seven-winters old when the jewel-prince took me,
 High-lord of heroes, at the hands of my father,
 Hrethel the hero-king had me in keeping,
 Gave me treasure and feasting, our kinship remembered;
 Not ever was I any less dear to him
 Knight in the boroughs, than the bairns of his household,
 Herebald and Hæthcyn and Higelac mine.
 To the eldest unjustly by acts of a kinsman
 Was murder-bed strewn, since him Hæthcyn from horn-bow
 His sheltering chieftain shot with an arrow,
 Erred in his aim and injured his kinsman,
 One brother the other, with blood-sprinkled spear:
 'Twas a feeless fight, finished in malice,
 Sad to his spirit; the folk-prince however
 Had to part from existence with vengeance untaken.
 So to hoar-headed hero 'tis heavily crushing¹
 To live to see his son as he rideth
 Young on the gallows: then measures he chanteth,
 A song of sorrow, when his son is hanging
 For the raven's delight, and aged and hoary
 He is unable to offer any assistance.
 Every morning his offspring's departure
 Is constant recalled: he cares not to wait for

Hrethel had certainly never seen a son of his ride on the gallows to feed the crows.

The passage beginning 'swá bið géomorlic' seems to be an effort to reach a full simile, 'as ... so.' 'As it is mournful for an old man, etc. ... so the defence of the Weders (2463) bore heart-sorrow, etc.' The verses 2451 to 2463½ would be parenthetical, the poet's feelings being so strong as to interrupt the simile. The punctuation of the fourth edition would be better—a comma after 'galgan' (2447). The translation may be indicated as follows: (Just) as it is sad for an old man to see his son ride young on the gallows when he himself is uttering mournful measures, a sorrowful song, while his son hangs for a comfort to the raven, and he, old and infirm, cannot render him any kelp—(he is constantly reminded, etc., 2451-2463)—so the defence of the Weders, etc.

The birth of an heir in his borough-enclosures,
Since that one through death-pain the deeds hath experienced.
He heart-grieved beholds in the house of his son the Wine-building wasted, the wind-lodging places
Reaved of their roaring; the riders are sleeping,
The knights in the grave; there's no sound of the harp-wood,
Joy in the yards, as of yore were familiar.

XXXV. REMINISCENCES (CONTINUED).— BEOWULF'S LAST BATTLE

"He seeks then his chamber, singeth a woe-song
One for the other; all too extensive
Seemed homesteads and plains. So the helm of the Weders
Mindful of Herebald heart-sorrow carried,
Stirred with emotion, nowise was able
To wreak his ruin on the ruthless destroyer:
He was unable to follow the warrior with hatred,
With deeds that were direful, though dear he not held him.
Then pressed by the pang this pain occasioned him,
He gave up glee, God-light elected;
He left to his sons, as the man that is rich does,
His land and fortress, when from life he departed.
Then was crime and hostility 'twixt Swedes and Geatmen,
O'er wide-stretching water warring was mutual,
Burdensome hatred, when Hrethel had perished,
And Ongentheow's offspring were active and valiant,
Wished not to hold to peace oversea, but Round Hreosna-beorh often accomplished
Cruellest massacre. This my kinsman avengèd,
The feud and fury, as 'tis found on inquiry,
Though one of them paid it with forfeit of life-joys,
With price that was hard: the struggle became then
Fatal to Hæthcyn, lord of the Geatmen.
Then I heard that at morning one brother the other
With edges of irons egged on to murder,
Where Ongentheow maketh onset on Eofor:
The helmet crashed, the hoary-haired Scylfing
Sword-smitten fell, his hand then remembered
Feud-hate sufficient, refused not the death-blow.
The gems that he gave me, with jewel-bright sword I
'Quited in contest, as occasion was offered:
Land he allowed me, life-joy at homestead,

Manor to live on. Little he needed
 From Gepids or Danes or in Sweden to look for Trooper less true, with treasure to buy him;
 'Mong foot-soldiers ever in front I would hie me,
 Alone in the vanguard, and evermore gladly
 Warfare shall wage, while this weapon endureth
 That late and early often did serve me
 When I proved before heroes the slayer of Dæghrefn,
 Knight of the Hugmen: he by no means was suffered
 To the king of the Frisians to carry the jewels,
 The breast-decoration; but the banner-possessor
 Bowed in the battle, brave-mooded atheling.
 No weapon was slayer, but war-grapple broke then
 The surge of his spirit, his body destroying.
 Now shall weapon's edge make war for the treasure,
 And hand and firm-sword." Beowulf spake then,
 Boast-words uttered—the latest occasion:
 "I braved in my youth-days battles unnumbered;
 Still am I willing the struggle to look for,
 Fame-deeds perform, folk-warden prudent,
 If the hateful despoiler forth from his cavern
 Seeketh me out!" Each of the heroes,
 Helm-bearers sturdy, he thereupon greeted Belovèd co-liegemmen—his last salutation:
 "No brand would I bear, no blade for the dragon, Wist I a way my word-boast to 'comply¹
 Else with the monster, as with Grendel I did it;
 But fire in the battle hot I expect there,
 Furious flame-burning: so I fixed on my body
 Target and war-mail. The ward of the barrow²
 I'll not flee from a foot-length, the foeman uncanny.

¹ The clause 2520(2)-2522(1), rendered by 'Wist I ... monster,' Gr., followed by S., translates substantially as follows: If I knew how else I might combat the boastful defiance of the monster.—The translation turns upon 'wiðgrípan,' a word not understood.

² B. emends and translates: I will not flee the space of a foot from the guard of the barrow, but there shall be to us a fight at the wall, as fate decrees, each one's Creator.

At the wall 'twill befall us as Fate decreeth,
Each one's Creator. I am eager in spirit,
With the wingèd war-hero to away with all boasting.
Bide on the barrow with burnies protected,
Earls in armor, which of us two may better
Bear his disaster, when the battle is over.
'Tis no matter of yours, and man cannot do it,
But me and me only, to measure his strength with
The monster of malice, might-deeds to 'complish.
I with prowess shall gain the gold, or the battle,
Direful death-woe will drag off your ruler!"

The mighty champion rose by his shield then,
Brave under helmet, in battle-mail went he
'Neath steep-rising stone-cliffs, the strength he relied on
Of one man alone: no work for a coward.

Then he saw by the wall who a great many battles
Had lived through, most worthy, when foot-troops collided,
Stone-arches standing, stout-hearted champion,
Saw a brook from the barrow bubbling out thenceward:
The flood of the fountain was fuming with war-flame:
Not nigh to the hoard, for season the briefest
Could he brave, without burning, the abyss that was yawning,
The drake was so fiery. The prince of the Weders
Caused then that words came from his bosom,
So fierce was his fury; the firm-hearted shouted:
His battle-clear voice came in resounding
'Neath the gray-colored stone. Stirred was his hatred,
The hoard-ward distinguished the speech of a man;
Time was no longer to look out for friendship.
The breath of the monster issued forth first,
Vapory war-sweat, out of the stone-cave:
The earth re-echoed. The earl 'neath the barrow
Lifted his shield, lord of the Geatmen,
Tow'rd the terrible stranger: the ring-twisted creature's
Heart was then ready to seek for a struggle.

The excellent battle-king first brandished his weapon,
 The ancient heirloom, of edges unblunted,³
 To the death-planners twain was terror from other.
 The lord of the troopers intrepidly stood then
 'Gainst his high-rising shield, when the dragon coiled him
 Quickly together: in corslet he bided.
 He went then in blazes, bended and striding,
 Hasting him forward. His life and body
 The targe well protected, for time-period shorter
 Than wish demanded for the well-renowned leader,
 Where he then for the first day was forced to be victor,
 Famous in battle, as Fate had not willed it.
 The lord of the Geatmen uplifted his hand then,
 Smiting the fire-drake with sword that was precious,
 That bright on the bone the blade-edge did weaken,
 Bit more feebly than his folk-leader needed,
 Burdened with bale-griefs. Then the barrow-protector,
 When the sword-blow had fallen, was fierce in his spirit,
 Flinging his fires, flamings of battle
 Gleamed then afar: the gold-friend of Weders
 Boasted no conquests, his battle-sword failed him
 Naked in conflict, as by no means it ought to,
 Long-trusty weapon. 'Twas no slight undertaking
 That Ecgtheow's famous offspring would leave
 The drake-cavern's bottom; he must live in some region
 Other than this, by the will of the dragon,
 As each one of earthmen existence must forfeit.
 'Twas early thereafter the excellent warriors
 Met with each other. Anew and afresh
 The hoard-ward took heart (gasps heaved then his bosom):
 Sorrow he suffered encircled with fire

³ The translation of this passage is based on 'unslaw' (2565), accepted by H.-So., in lieu of the long-standing 'ungléaw.' The former is taken as an adj. limiting 'sweord'; the latter as an adj. c. 'gúð-cyning': The good war-king, rash with edges, brandished his sword, his old relic. The latter gives a more rhetorical Anglo-Saxon (poetical) sentence.

Who the people erst governed. His companions by no means
Were banded about him, bairns of the princes,
With valorous spirit, but they sped to the forest,
Seeking for safety. The soul-deeps of one were Ruffled by care: kin-love can never Aught in him waver who well doth consider.

XXXVI. WIGLAF THE TRUSTY.—BEOWULF IS DESERTED BY FRIENDS AND BY SWORD

The son of Weohstan was Wiglaf entitled,
Shield-warrior precious, prince of the Scylfings,
Ælfhere's kinsman: he saw his dear liegelord
Enduring the heat 'neath helmet and visor.
Then he minded the holding that erst he had given him,
The Wægmunding warriors' wealth-blessèd homestead,
Each of the folk-rights his father had wielded;
He was hot for the battle, his hand seized the target,
The yellow-bark shield, he unsheathed his old weapon,
Which was known among earthmen as the relic of Eanmund,
Ohthere's offspring, whom, exiled and friendless,
Weohstan did slay with sword-edge in battle,
And carried his kinsman the clear-shining helmet,
The ring-made burnie, the old giant-weapon
That Onela gave him, his boon-fellow's armor,
Ready war-trappings: he the feud did not mention,
Though he'd fatally smitten the son of his brother.
Many a half-year held he the treasures,
The bill and the burnie, till his bairn became able,
Like his father before him, fame-deeds to 'complish;
Then he gave him 'mong Geatmen a goodly array of Weeds for his warfare; he went from life then
Old on his journey. 'Twas the earliest time then
That the youthful champion might charge in the battle
Aiding his liegelord; his spirit was dauntless.
Nor did kinsman's bequest quail at the battle:
This the dragon discovered on their coming together.
Wiglaf uttered many a right-saying,
Said to his fellows, sad was his spirit:
"I remember the time when, tasting the mead-cup,
We promised in the hall the lord of us all
Who gave us these ring-treasures, that this battle-equipment,

Swords and helmets, we'd certainly quite him,
 Should need of such aid ever befall him:
 In the war-band he chose us for this journey spontaneously,
 Stirred us to glory and gave me these jewels,
 Since he held and esteemed us trust-worthy spearmen,
 Hardy helm-bearers, though this hero-achievement
 Our lord intended alone to accomplish,
 Ward of his people, for most of achievements,
 Doings audacious, he did among earth-folk.
 The day is now come when the ruler of earthmen
 Needeth the vigor of valiant heroes:
 Let us wend us towards him, the war-prince to succor,
 While the heat yet rageth, horrible fire-fight.
 God wot in me, 'tis mickle the liefer
 The blaze should embrace my body and eat it
 With my treasure-bestower. Meseemeth not proper
 To bear our battle-shields back to our country,
 'Less first we are able to fell and destroy the Long-hating foeman, to defend the life of The prince of the Weders. Well do I know 't isn't Earned by his exploits, he only of Geatmen
 Sorrow should suffer, sink in the battle:
 Brand and helmet to us both shall be common,
¹Shield-cover, burnie." Through the bale-smoke he stalked then,
 Went under helmet to the help of his chieftain,
 Briefly discoursing: "Beowulf dear,
 Perform thou all fully, as thou formerly saidst,
 In thy youthful years, that while yet thou livedst
 Thou wouldst let thine honor not ever be lessened.
 Thy life thou shalt save, mighty in actions,
 Atheling undaunted, with all of thy vigor;

¹ The passage 'Brand ... burnie,' is much disputed. In the first place, some eminent critics assume a gap of at least two half-verses.—'Úrum' (2660), being a peculiar form, has been much discussed. 'Byrdu-scrúd' is also a crux. B. suggests 'býwdu-scrúd' = splendid vestments. Nor is 'bám' accepted by all, 'béon' being suggested. Whatever the individual words, the passage must mean, "I intend to share with him my equipments of defence."

I'll give thee assistance." The dragon came raging,
Wild-mooded stranger, when these words had been uttered
('Twas the second occasion), seeking his enemies,
Men that were hated, with hot-gleaming fire-waves;
With blaze-billows burned the board to its edges:
The fight-armor failed then to furnish assistance
To the youthful spear-hero: but the young-aged stripling
Quickly advanced 'neath his kinsman's war-target,
Since his own had been ground in the grip of the fire.
Then the warrior-king was careful of glory,
He soundly smote with sword-for-the-battle,
That it stood in the head by hatred driven;
Nægling was shivered, the old and iron-made
Brand of Beowulf in battle deceived him.
'Twas denied him that edges of irons were able To help in the battle; the hand was too mighty
²Which every weapon, as I heard on inquiry,
Outstruck in its stroke, when to struggle he carried
The wonderful war-sword: it waxed him no better.
Then the people-despoiler—third of his onsets—
Fierce-raging fire-drake, of feud-hate was mindful,
Charged on the strong one, when chance was afforded,
Heated and war-grim, seized on his neck
With teeth that were bitter; he bloody did wax with Soul-gore seething; sword-blood in waves boiled.

² B. would render: Which, as I heard, excelled in stroke every sword that he carried to the strife, even the strongest (sword). For 'þonne' he reads 'þone,' rel. pr.

XXXVII. THE FATAL STRUGGLE.—BEOWULF'S LAST MOMENTS

Then I heard that at need of the king of the people
 The upstanding earlman exhibited prowess,
 Vigor and courage, as suited his nature;
¹He his head did not guard, but the high-minded liegeman's
 Hand was consumed, when he succored his kinsman,
 So he struck the strife-bringing strange-comer lower,
 Earl-thane in armor, that in went the weapon
 Gleaming and plated, that 'gan then the fire²
 Later to lessen. The liegelord himself then
 Retained his consciousness, brandished his war-knife,
 Battle-sharp, bitter, that he bare on his armor:
 The Weder-lord cut the worm in the middle.
 They had felled the enemy (life drove out then³ Puissant prowess), the pair had destroyed him,
 Land-chiefs related: so a liegeman should prove him,
 A thaneman when needed. To the prince 'twas the last of His era of conquest by his own great achievements,
 The latest of world-deeds. The wound then began
 Which the earth-dwelling dragon erstwhile had wrought him
 To burn and to swell. He soon then discovered
 That bitterest bale-woe in his bosom was raging,
 Poison within. The atheling advanced then,
 That along by the wall, he prudent of spirit
 Might sit on a settle; he saw the giant-work,

¹ B. renders: He (W.) did not regard his (the dragon's) head (since Beowulf had struck it without effect), but struck the dragon a little lower down.—One crux is to find out whose head is meant; another is to bring out the antithesis between 'head' and 'hand.'

² 'pæt pæt fȳr' (2702), S. emends to 'pá pæt fȳr' = when the fire began to grow less intense afterward. This emendation relieves the passage of a plethora of conjunctive pæt's.

³ For 'gefylðan' (2707), S. proposes 'gefylde.' The passage would read: He felled the foe (life drove out strength), and they then both had destroyed him, chieftains related. This gives Beowulf the credit of having felled the dragon; then they combine to annihilate him.—For 'ellen' (2707), Kl. suggests 'e(a)llne.'—The reading 'life drove out strength' is very unsatisfactory and very peculiar. I would suggest as follows: Adopt S.'s emendation, remove H.'s parenthesis, read 'ferh-ellen wræc,' and translate: He felled the foe, drove out his life-strength (that is, made him hors de combat), and then they both, etc.

How arches of stone strengthened with pillars
The earth-hall eternal inward supported.
Then the long-worthy liegeman laved with his hand the Far-famous chieftain, gory from sword-edge,
Refreshing the face of his friend-lord and ruler,
Sated with battle, unbinding his helmet.
Beowulf answered, of his injury spake he,
His wound that was fatal (he was fully aware
He had lived his allotted life-days enjoying
The pleasures of earth; then past was entirely
His measure of days, death very near):
“My son I would give now my battle-equipments,
Had any of heirs been after me granted,
Along of my body. This people I governed
Fifty of winters: no king ’mong my neighbors
Dared to encounter me with comrades-in-battle,
Try me with terror. The time to me ordered
I bided at home, mine own kept fitly,
Sought me no snares, swore me not many Oaths in injustice. Joy over all this
I’m able to have, though ill with my death-wounds;
Hence the Ruler of Earthmen need not charge me
With the killing of kinsmen, when cometh my life out
Forth from my body. Fare thou with haste now
To behold the hoard ’neath the hoar-grayish stone,
Well-lovèd Wiglaf, now the worm is a-lying,
Sore-wounded sleepeth, disseized of his treasure.
Go thou in haste that treasures of old I,
Gold-wealth may gaze on, together see lying
The ether-bright jewels, be easier able,
Having the heap of hoard-gems, to yield my Life and the land-folk whom long I have governed.”

XXXVIII. WIGLAF PLUNDERS THE DRAGON'S DEN.—BEOWULF'S DEATH

Then heard I that Wihstan's son very quickly,
 These words being uttered, heeded his liegelord
 Wounded and war-sick, went in his armor,
 His well-woven ring-mail, 'neath the roof of the barrow.
 Then the trusty retainer treasure-gems many Victorious saw, when the seat he came near to,
 Gold-treasure sparkling spread on the bottom,
 Wonder on the wall, and the worm-creature's cavern,
 The ancient dawn-flier's, vessels a-standing,
 Cups of the ancients of cleansers bereaved,
 Robbed of their ornaments: there were helmets in numbers,
 Old and rust-eaten, arm-bracelets many,
 Artfully woven. Wealth can easily,
 Gold on the sea-bottom, turn into vanity¹
 Each one of earthmen, arm him who pleaseth!
 And he saw there lying an all-golden banner
 High o'er the hoard, of hand-wonders greatest,
 Linkèd with lacets: a light from it sparkled,
 That the floor of the cavern he was able to look on,
 To examine the jewels. Sight of the dragon
 Not any was offered, but edge offcarried him.
 Then I heard that the hero the hoard-treasure plundered,
 The giant-work ancient reaved in the cavern,
 Bare on his bosom the beakers and platters,
 As himself would fain have it, and took off the standard,
 The brightest of beacons;² the bill had erst injured

¹ The word 'oferhígian' (2767) being vague and little understood, two quite distinct translations of this passage have arisen. One takes 'oferhígian' as meaning 'to exceed,' and, inserting 'hord' after 'gehwoone,' renders: The treasure may easily, the gold in the ground, exceed in value every hoard of man, hide it who will. The other takes 'oferhígian' as meaning 'to render arrogant,' and, giving the sentence a moralizing tone, renders substantially as in the body of this work. (Cf. 28 13 et seq.)

² The passage beginning here is very much disputed. 'The bill of the old lord' is by some regarded as Beowulf's sword; by others, as that of the ancient possessor of the hoard. 'Ær gescód' (2778), translated in this work as verb and adverb, is by some regarded as a compound participial adj. = sheathed in brass.

(Its edge was of iron), the old-ruler's weapon,
Him who long had watched as ward of the jewels,
Who fire-terror carried hot for the treasure,
Rolling in battle, in middlemost darkness,
Till murdered he perished. The messenger hastened,
Not loth to return, hurried by jewels:
Curiosity urged him if, excellent-mooded,
Alive he should find the lord of the Weders
Mortally wounded, at the place where he left him.
'Mid the jewels he found then the famous old chieftain,
His liegeland beloved, at his life's-end gory:
He thereupon 'gan to lave him with water,
Till the point of his word pierced his breast-hoard.
Beowulf spake (the gold-gems he noticed),
The old one in sorrow: "For the jewels I look on Thanks do I utter for all to the Ruler,
Wieler of Worship, with words of devotion,
The Lord everlasting, that He let me such treasures
Gain for my people ere death overtook me.
Since I've bartered the aged life to me granted
For treasure of jewels, attend ye henceforward
The wants of the war-thanes; I can wait here no longer.
The battle-famed bid ye to build them a grave-hill,
Bright when I'm burned, at the brim-current's limit;
As a memory-mark to the men I have governed,
Aloft it shall tower on Whale's-Ness uprising,
That earls of the ocean hereafter may call it
Beowulf's barrow, those who barks ever-dashing
From a distance shall drive o'er the darkness of waters."
The bold-mooded troop-lord took from his neck then
The ring that was golden, gave to his liegeman,
The youthful war-hero, his gold-flashing helmet,
His collar and war-mail, bade him well to enjoy them:
"Thou art latest left of the line of our kindred,
Of Wægmunding people: Weird hath offcarried

All of my kinsmen to the Creator's glory,
Earls in their vigor: I shall after them fare."
'Twas the aged liegelord's last-spoken word in His musings of spirit, ere he mounted the fire,
The battle-waves burning: from his bosom departed
His soul to seek the sainted ones' glory.

XXXIX. THE DEAD FOES.—WIGLAF'S BITTER TAUNTS

It had wofully chanced then the youthful retainer
To behold on earth the most ardent-belovèd
At his life-days' limit, lying there helpless.
The slayer too lay there, of life all bereavèd,
Horrible earth-drake, harassed with sorrow:
The round-twisted monster was permitted no longer
To govern the ring-hoards, but edges of war-swords
Mightily seized him, battle-sharp, sturdy Leavings of hammers, that still from his wounds
The flier-from-farland fell to the earth
Hard by his hoard-house, hopped he at midnight
Not e'er through the air, nor exulting in jewels
Suffered them to see him: but he sank then to earthward
Through the hero-chief's handwork. I heard sure it throve then
But few in the land of liegemen of valor,
Though of every achievement bold he had proved him,
To run 'gainst the breath of the venomous scather,
Or the hall of the treasure to trouble with hand-blows,
If he watching had found the ward of the hoard-hall
On the barrow abiding. Beowulf's part of
The treasure of jewels was paid for with death;
Each of the twain had attained to the end of Life so unlasting. Not long was the time till
The tardy-at-battle returned from the thicket,
The timid truce-breakers ten all together,
Who durst not before play with the lances
In the prince of the people's pressing emergency;
But blushing with shame, with shields they betook them,
With arms and armor where the old one was lying:
They gazed upon Wiglaf. He was sitting exhausted,
Foot-going fighter, not far from the shoulders
Of the lord of the people, would rouse him with water;

No whit did it help him; though he hoped for it keenly,
 He was able on earth not at all in the leader
 Life to retain, and nowise to alter
 The will of the Wielder; the World-Ruler's power¹
 Would govern the actions of each one of heroes,
 As yet He is doing. From the young one forthwith then Could grim-worded greeting be got for him quickly
 Whose courage had failed him. Wiglaf discoursed then,
 Weohstan his son, sad-mooded hero,
 Looked on the hated: "He who soothness will utter
 Can say that the liegelord who gave you the jewels,
 The ornament-armor wherein ye are standing,
 When on ale-bench often he offered to hall-men
 Helmet and burnie, the prince to his liegemen,
 As best upon earth he was able to find him,—
 That he wildly wasted his war-gear undoubtedly When battle o'ertook him.² The troop-king no need had
 To glory in comrades; yet God permitted him,
 Victory-Wielder, with weapon unaided
 Himself to avenge, when vigor was needed.
 I life-protection but little was able To give him in battle, and I 'gan, notwithstanding,
 Helping my kinsman (my strength overtaking):
 He waxed the weaker when with weapon I smote on My mortal opponent, the fire less strongly
 Flamed from his bosom. Too few of protectors
 Came round the king at the critical moment.
 Now must ornament-taking and weapon-bestowing,
 Home-joyance all, cease for your kindred,
 Food for the people; each of your warriors
 Must needs be bereaved of rights that he holdeth

¹ For 'dædum rædan' (2859) B. suggests 'déað árædan,' and renders: The might (or judgment) of God would determine death for every man, as he still does.

² Some critics, H. himself in earlier editions, put the clause, 'When ... him' (A.-S. 'þá ... beget') with the following sentence; that is, they make it dependent upon 'þorfte' (2875) instead of upon 'forwurpe' (2873).

In landed possessions, when faraway nobles
Shall learn of your leaving your lord so basely,
The dastardly deed. Death is more pleasant
To every earlman than infamous life is!"

XL. THE MESSENGER OF DEATH

Then he charged that the battle be announced at the hedge
 Up o'er the cliff-edge, where the earl-troopers bided
 The whole of the morning, mood-wretched sat them,
 Bearers of battle-shields, both things expecting,
 The end of his lifetime and the coming again of The liegelord belovèd. Little reserved he
 Of news that was known, who the ness-cliff did travel,
 But he truly discoursed to all that could hear him:
 "Now the free-giving friend-lord of the folk of the Weders,
 The folk-prince of Geatmen, is fast in his death-bed,
 By the deeds of the dragon in death-bed abideth;
 Along with him lieth his life-taking foeman
 Slain with knife-wounds: he was wholly unable
 To injure at all the ill-planning monster
 With bite of his sword-edge. Wiglaf is sitting,
 Offspring of Wihstan, up over Beowulf,
 Earl o'er another whose end-day hath reached him,
 Head-watch holdeth o'er heroes unliving,¹
 For friend and for foeman. The folk now expecteth
 A season of strife when the death of the folk-king
 To Frankmen and Frisians in far-lands is published.
 The war-hatred waxed warm 'gainst the Hugmen,
 When Higelac came with an army of vessels
 Faring to Friesland, where the Frankmen in battle
 Humbled him and bravely with overmight 'complished
 That the mail-clad warrior must sink in the battle,
 Fell 'mid his folk-troop: no fret-gems presented
 The atheling to earlmen; aye was denied us
 Merewing's mercy. The men of the Swedelands
 For truce or for truth trust I but little;

¹ 'Hige-méðum' (2910) is glossed by H. as dat. plu. (= for the dead). S. proposes 'hige-méðe,' nom. sing. limiting Wigláf; i.e. W., mood-weary, holds head-watch o'er friend and foe.—B. suggests taking the word as dat. inst. plu. of an abstract noun in '-u.' The translation would be substantially the same as S.'s.

But widely 'twas known that near Ravenswood Ongentheow
Sundered Hæthcyn the Hrethling from life-joys,
When for pride overweening the War-Scylfings first did
Seek the Geatmen with savage intentions.
Early did Ohthere's age-laden father,
Old and terrible, give blow in requital,
Killing the sea-king, the queen-mother rescued,
The old one his consort deprived of her gold,
Onela's mother and Ohthere's also,
And then followed the feud-nursing foemen till hardly,
Reaved of their ruler, they Ravenswood entered.
Then with vast-numbered forces he assaulted the remnant,
Weary with wounds, woe often promised
The livelong night to the sad-hearted war-troop:
Said he at morning would kill them with edges of weapons,
Some on the gallows for glee to the fowls.
Aid came after to the anxious-in-spirit
At dawn of the day, after Higelac's bugle
And trumpet-sound heard they, when the good one proceeded
And faring followed the flower of the troopers.

XLI. THE MESSENGER'S RETROSPECT

"The blood-stained trace of Swedes and Geatmen,
 The death-rush of warmen, widely was noticed,
 How the folks with each other feud did awaken.
 The worthy one went then¹ with well-beloved comrades,
 Old and dejected to go to the fastness,
 Ongentheo earl upward then turned him;
 Of Higelac's battle he'd heard on inquiry,
 The exultant one's prowess, despaired of resistance,
 With earls of the ocean to be able to struggle,
 'Gainst sea-going sailors to save the hoard-treasure,
 His wife and his children; he fled after thenceward
 Old 'neath the earth-wall. Then was offered pursuance
 To the braves of the Swedemen, the banner² to Higelac.
 They fared then forth o'er the field-of-protection,
 When the Hrethling heroes hedgeward had thronged them.
 Then with edges of irons was Ongentheow driven,
 The gray-haired to tarry, that the troop-ruler had to Suffer the power solely of Eofor:
 Wulf then wildly with weapon assaulted him,
 Wonred his son, that for swinge of the edges
 The blood from his body burst out in currents,
 Forth 'neath his hair. He feared not however,
 Gray-headed Scylfing, but speedily quited
 The wasting wound-stroke with worse exchange,
 When the king of thethane-troop thither did turn him:
 The wise-mooded son of Wonred was powerless
 To give a return-blow to the age-hoary man,
 But his head-shielding helmet first hewed he to pieces,
 That flecked with gore perforce he did totter,

¹ For 'góða,' which seems a surprising epithet for a Geat to apply to the "terrible" Ongentheow, B. suggests 'gomela.' The passage would then stand: 'The old one went then,' etc.

² For 'segn Higeláce,' K., Th., and B. propose 'segn Higeláces,' meaning: Higelac's banner followed the Swedes (in pursuit). —S. suggests 'sæcc Higeláces,' and renders: Higelac's pursuit. —The H.-So. reading, as translated in our text, means that the banner of the enemy was captured and brought to Higelac as a trophy.

Fell to the earth; not fey was he yet then,
But up did he spring though an edge-wound had reached him.
Then Higelac's vassal, valiant and dauntless,
When his brother lay dead, made his broad-bladed weapon,
Giant-sword ancient, defence of the giants,
Bound o'er the shield-wall; the folk-prince succumbed then,
Shepherd of people, was pierced to the vitals.
There were many attendants who bound up his kinsman,
Carried him quickly when occasion was granted
That the place of the slain they were suffered to manage.
This pending, one hero plundered the other,
His armor of iron from Ongentheow ravished,
His hard-sword hilted and helmet together;
The old one's equipments he carried to Higelac.
He the jewels received, and rewards 'mid the troopers
Graciously promised, and so did accomplish:
The king of the Weders requited the war-rush,
Hrethel's descendant, when home he repaired him,
To Eofor and Wulf with wide-lavished treasures,
To each of them granted a hundred of thousands
In land and rings wrought out of wire:
None upon mid-earth needed to twit him³
With the gifts he gave them, when glory they conquered;
And to Eofor then gave he his one only daughter,
The honor of home, as an earnest of favor.
That's the feud and hatred—as ween I 'twill happen—
The anger of earthmen, that earls of the Swedemen
Will visit on us, when they hear that our leader
Lifeless is lying, he who longtime protected
His hoard and kingdom 'gainst hating assailers,
Who on the fall of the heroes defended of yore
The deed-mighty Scyldings,⁴ did for the troopers

³ The rendering given in this translation represents the king as being generous beyond the possibility of reproach; but some authorities construe 'him' (2996) as plu., and understand the passage to mean that no one reproached the two brothers with having received more reward than they were entitled to.

What best did avail them, and further moreover Hero-deeds 'complished. Now is haste most fitting,
 That the lord of liegemen we look upon yonder,
 And that one carry on journey to death-pyre
 Who ring-presents gave us. Not aught of it all
 Shall melt with the brave one—there's a mass of bright jewels,
 Gold beyond measure, grewsomely purchased
 And ending it all ornament-rings too
 Bought with his life; these fire shall devour,
 Flame shall cover, no earlman shall wear
 A jewel-memento, nor beautiful virgin
 Have on her neck rings to adorn her,
 But wretched in spirit bereaved of gold-gems
 She shall oft with others be exiled and banished,
 Since the leader of liegemen hath laughter forsaken,
 Mirth and merriment. Hence many a war-spear
 Cold from the morning shall be clutched in the fingers, Heaved in the hand, no harp-music's sound shall Waken the warriors, but the wan-coated raven
 Fain over fey ones freely shall gabble,
 Shall say to the eagle how he sped in the eating,
 When, the wolf his companion, he plundered the slain."
 So the high-minded hero was rehearsing these stories Loathsome to hear; he lied as to few of Weirds and of words. All the war-troop arose then,
 'Neath the Eagle's Cape sadly betook them,
 Weeping and woful, the wonder to look at.
 They saw on the sand then soulless a-lying,
 His slaughter-bed holding, him who rings had given them
 In days that were done; then the death-bringing moment
 Was come to the good one, that the king very warlike,

⁴ The name 'Scyldingas' here (3006) has caused much discussion, and given rise to several theories, the most important of which are as follows: (1) After the downfall of Hrothgar's family, Beowulf was king of the Danes, or Scyldings. (2) For 'Scyldingas' read 'Scylfingas'—that is, after killing Eadgils, the Scylfing prince, Beowulf conquered his land, and held it in subjection. (3) M. considers 3006 a thoughtless repetition of 2053. (Cf. H.-So.)

Wielder of Weders, with wonder-death perished.
 First they beheld there a creature more wondrous,
 The worm on the field, in front of them lying,
 The foeman before them: the fire-spewing dragon,
 Ghostly and grisly guest in his terrors,
 Was scorched in the fire; as he lay there he measured
 Fifty of feet; came forth in the night-time⁵
 To rejoice in the air, thereafter departing
 To visit his den; he in death was then fastened,
 He would joy in no other earth-hollowed caverns.
 There stood round about him beakers and vessels,
 Dishes were lying and dear-valued weapons,
 With iron-rust eaten, as in earth's mighty bosom
 A thousand of winters there they had rested:
 That mighty bequest then with magic was guarded,
 Gold of the ancients, that earlman not any
 The ring-hall could touch, save Ruling-God only,
 Sooth-king of Vict'ries gave whom He wished to ⁶ (He is earth-folk's protector) to open the treasure,
 E'en to such among mortals as seemed to Him proper.

⁵ B. takes 'nihtes' and 'hwilum' (3045) as separate adverbial cases, and renders: Joy in the air had he of yore by night, etc. He thinks that the idea of vanished time ought to be expressed.

⁶ The parenthesis is by some emended so as to read: (1) (He (i.e. God) is the hope of men); (2) (he is the hope of heroes). Gr.'s reading has no parenthesis, but says: ... could touch, unless God himself, true king of victories, gave to whom he would to open the treasure, the secret place of enchanters, etc. The last is rejected on many grounds.

XLII. WIGLAF'S SAD STORY.—THE HOARD CARRIED OFF

Then 'twas seen that the journey prospered him little
 Who wrongly within had the ornaments hidden¹
 Down 'neath the wall. The warden erst slaughtered
 Some few of the folk-troop: the feud then thereafter
 Was hotly avengèd. 'Tis a wonder where,²
 When the strength-famous trooper has attained to the end of Life-days allotted, then no longer the man may Remain with his kinsmen where mead-cups are flowing.
 So to Beowulf happened when the ward of the barrow,
 Assaults, he sought for: himself had no knowledge
 How his leaving this life was likely to happen.
 So to doomsday, famous folk-leaders down did
 Call it with curses—who 'complished it there—
 That that man should be ever of ill-deeds convicted,
 Confined in foul-places, fastened in hell-bonds,
 Punished with plagues, who this place should e'er ravage.³
 He cared not for gold: rather the Wielder's
 Favor preferred he first to get sight of.⁴
 Wiglaf discoursed then, Wihstan his son:
 "Oft many an earlman on one man's account must Sorrow endure, as to us it hath happened.
 The liegelord belovèd we could little prevail on,
 Kingdom's keeper, counsel to follow,
 Not to go to the guardian of the gold-hoard, but let him

¹ For 'gehýdde,' B. suggests 'gehýðde': the passage would stand as above except the change of 'hidden' (v. 2) to 'plundered.' The reference, however, would be to the thief, not to the dragon.

² The passage 'Wundur ... búan' (3063-3066), M. took to be a question asking whether it was strange that a man should die when his appointed time had come.—B. sees a corruption, and makes emendations introducing the idea that a brave man should not die from sickness or from old age, but should find death in the performance of some deed of daring.—S. sees an indirect question introduced by 'hwár' and dependent upon 'wundur': A secret is it when the hero is to die, etc.—Why may the two clauses not be parallel, and the whole passage an Old English cry of 'How wonderful is death!'?—S.'s is the best yet offered, if 'wundor' means 'mystery.'

³ For 'strude' in H.-So., S. suggests 'stride.' This would require 'ravage' (v. 16) to be changed to 'tread.'

⁴ He cared ... sight of' (17, 18), S. emends so as to read as follows: He (Beowulf) had not before seen the favor of the avaricious possessor.

Lie where he long was, live in his dwelling
 Till the end of the world. Met we a destiny
 Hard to endure: the hoard has been looked at,
 Been gained very grimly; too grievous the fate that⁵
 The prince of the people pricked to come thither.
 I was therein and all of it looked at,
 The building's equipments, since access was given me,
 Not kindly at all entrance permitted
 Within under earth-wall. Hastily seized I
 And held in my hands a huge-weighing burden
 Of hoard-treasures costly, hither out bare them
 To my liegelord beloved: life was yet in him,
 And consciousness also; the old one discoursed then
 Much and mournfully, commanded to greet you,
 Bade that remembering the deeds of your friend-lord
 Ye build on the fire-hill of corpses a lofty
 Burial-barrow, broad and far-famous,
 As 'mid world-dwelling warriors he was widely most honored
 While he reveled in riches. Let us rouse us and hasten
 Again to see and seek for the treasure,
 The wonder 'neath wall. The way I will show you,
 That close ye may look at ring-gems sufficient
 And gold in abundance. Let the bier with promptness
 Fully be fashioned, when forth we shall come,
 And lift we our lord, then, where long he shall tarry,
 Well-beloved warrior, 'neath the Wielder's protection."
 Then the son of Wihstan bade orders be given,
 Mood-valiant man, to many of heroes,
 Holders of homesteads, that they hither from far,
⁶Leaders of liegemen, should look for the good one
 With wood for his pyre: "The flame shall now swallow

⁵ B. renders: That which drew the king thither (i.e. the treasure) was granted us, but in such a way that it overcomes us.

⁶ 'Folc-ágende' (3114) B. takes as dat. sing. with 'góðum,' and refers it to Beowulf; that is, Should bring fire-wood to the place where the good folk-ruler lay.

(The wan fire shall wax⁷) the warriors' leader
Who the rain of the iron often abided,
When, sturdily hurled, the storm of the arrows
Leapt o'er linden-wall, the lance rendered service,
Furnished with feathers followed the arrow."
Now the wise-mooded son of Wihstan did summon
The best of the braves from the band of the ruler
Seven together; 'neath the enemy's roof he Went with the seven; one of the heroes
Who fared at the front, a fire-blazing torch-light
Bare in his hand. No lot then decided
Who that hoard should havoc, when hero-earls saw it
Lying in the cavern uncared-for entirely,
Rusting to ruin: they rued then but little
That they hastily hence hauled out the treasure,
The dear-valued jewels; the dragon eke pushed they,
The worm o'er the wall, let the wave-currents take him,
The waters enwind the ward of the treasures.
There wounden gold on a wain was uploaded,
A mass unmeasured, the men-leader off then,
The hero hoary, to Whale's-Ness was carried.

⁷ C. proposes to take 'weaxan' = L. 'vescor,' and translate devour. This gives a parallel to 'fretan' above. The parenthesis would be discarded and the passage read: Now shall the fire consume, the wan-flame devour, the prince of warriors, etc.

XLIII. THE BURNING OF BEOWULF

The folk of the Geatmen got him then ready
 A pile on the earth strong for the burning,
 Behung with helmets, hero-knights' targets,
 And bright-shining burnies, as he begged they should have them;
 Then wailing war-heroes their world-famous chieftain,
 Their liegelord beloved, laid in the middle.
 Soldiers began then to make on the barrow
 The largest of dead-fires: dark o'er the vapor
 The smoke-cloud ascended, the sad-roaring fire,
 Mingled with weeping (the wind-roar subsided)
 Till the building of bone it had broken to pieces,
 Hot in the heart. Heavy in spirit
 They mood-sad lamented the men-leader's ruin;
 And mournful measures the much-grieving widow

The men of the Weders made accordingly
 A hill on the height, high and extensive,
 Of sea-going sailors to be seen from a distance,
 And the brave one's beacon built where the fire was,
 In ten-days' space, with a wall surrounded it,
 As wisest of world-folk could most worthily plan it.
 They placed in the barrow rings and jewels,
 All such ornaments as erst in the treasure
 War-mooded men had won in possession:
 The earnings of earlmen to earth they entrusted,
 The gold to the dust, where yet it remaineth
 As useless to mortals as in foregoing eras.
 'Round the dead-mound rode then the doughty-in-battle,

Bairns of all twelve of the chiefs of the people,
More would they mourn, lament for their ruler,
Speak in measure, mention him with pleasure,
Weighed his worth, and his warlike achievements
Mightily commended, as 'tis meet one praise his Liegelord in words and love him in spirit,
When forth from his body he fares to destruction.
So lamented mourning the men of the Geats,
Fond-loving vassals, the fall of their lord,
Said he was kindest of kings under heaven,
Gentlest of men, most winning of manner,
Friendliest to folk-troops and fondest of honor.

ADDENDA

Several discrepancies and other oversights have been noticed in the H.-So. glossary. Of these a good part were avoided by Harrison and Sharp, the American editors of Beowulf, in their last edition, 1888. The rest will, I hope, be noticed in their fourth edition. As, however, this book may fall into the hands of some who have no copy of the American edition, it seems best to notice all the principal oversights of the German editors.

From hámb (194).—Notes and glossary conflict; the latter not having been altered to suit the conclusions accepted in the former.

Þær gelyfan sceal dryhtnes dóme (440).—Under ‘dóm’ H. says ‘the might of the Lord’; while under ‘gelyfan’ he says ‘the judgment of the Lord.’

Eal bencþelu (486).—Under ‘benc-þelu’ H. says nom. plu.; while under ‘eal’ he says nom. sing.

Heatho-ræmas (519).—Under ‘ætberan’ H. translates ‘to the Heathoremes’; while under ‘Heatho-ræmas’ he says ‘Heathoræmas reaches Breca in the swimming-match with Beowulf.’ Harrison and Sharp (3d edition, 1888) avoid the discrepancy.

Fáh féond-scaða (554).—Under ‘féond-scaða’ H. says ‘a gleaming sea-monster’; under ‘fáh’ he says ‘hostile.’

Onfeng hraðe inwit-þancum (749).—Under ‘onfón’ H. says ‘he received the maliciously-disposed one’; under ‘inwit-þanc’ he says ‘he grasped,’ etc.

Níð-wundor séon (1366).—Under ‘níð-wundor’ H. calls this word itself nom. sing.; under ‘séon’ he translates it as accus. sing., understanding ‘man’ as subject of ‘séon.’ H. and S. (3d edition) make the correction.

Forgeaf hilde-bille (1521).—H., under the second word, calls it instr. dat.; while under ‘forgifan’ he makes it the dat. of indir. obj. H. and S. (3d edition) make the change.

Brád and brún-ecg (1547).—Under ‘brád’ H. says ‘das breite Hüftmesser mit bronzener Klinge’; under ‘brún-ecg’ he says ‘ihr breites Hüftmesser mit blitzender Klinge.’

Yðelíce (1557).—Under this word H. makes it modify ‘ástód.’ If this be right, the punctuation of the fifth edition is wrong. See H. and S., appendix.

Sélran gesóhte (1840).—Under ‘sél’ and ‘gesécan’ H. calls these two words accus. plu.; but this is clearly an error, as both are nom. plu., pred. nom. H. and S. correct under ‘sél.’

Wið sylfne (1978).—Under ‘wið’ and ‘gesittan’ H. says ‘wið = near, by’; under ‘self’ he says ‘opposite.’

þéow (2225) is omitted from the glossary.

For duguðum (2502).—Under ‘duguð’ H. translates this phrase, ‘in Tüchtigkeit’; under ‘for,’ by ‘vor der edlen Kriegerschaar.’

þær (2574).—Under ‘wealdan’ H. translates þær by ‘wo’; under ‘mótan,’ by ‘da.’ H. and S. suggest ‘if’ in both passages.

Wunde (2726).—Under ‘wund’ H. says ‘dative,’ and under ‘wæl-bléate’ he says ‘accus.’ It is without doubt accus., parallel with ‘benne.’

Strengum gebæded (3118).—Under ‘strengo’ H. says ‘Strengum’ = mit Macht; under ‘gebæded’ he translates ‘von den Sehnen.’ H. and S. correct this discrepancy by rejecting the second reading.

Bronda be láfe (3162).—A recent emendation. The fourth edition had ‘bronda betost.’ In the fifth edition the editor neglects to change the glossary to suit the new emendation. See ‘bewyrcan.’
